A MOUNTAIN TRAGEDY!

Josiah Dale Shot and Killed on Nittany Mountain.

ON MONDAY EVENING

Was Driving Home to Centre Hall After Spending the Day at his Farm —Faithful horse Brings Body Home.

BELIEVED TO BE DELIBERATE MURDER.

The pretty little village of Centre Hall, nestling at the foot of Nittany mountain, was thrown into terrible excitement Monday evening when it became known that Josiah Dale, a well known citizen of the village, had been shot and killed while on his way home from his farm on top of Nittany mountain. If all accounts are true a dastardly murder has been committed and the authorities should spare no effort to run down the perpetrator of this awful crime.

Josiah Dale the victim of this tragedy, is a man about 60 years of age. He is quite well known in Centre and adjoining counties, having for many years past, spent a part of each year traveling the country selling notions. When not on the road he gives his attention to the old Hoffer farm on top of Nittany mountain owned by his wife. On Monday morning he left his home in Centre Hall and taking his horse and buggy drove to the farm and spent the day helping their farmer Andrew Moyer, husk corn.

It was usual for him to return home by six o'clock or a little after but when he did not arrive and it got to be eight o'clock, his wife became very much worried about him. The Dales live next door to ex-Sheriff Cyrus Brungart, and Mrs. Dale went over to Brungart's and told the Sheriff about it. He secured a lantern and with James Alexander, who lives on the other side of Dales started out to search for the missing man. Mr. Brungart went up the alley, while Mr. Alexander took the road. They had not gone far until Mr. Brungart heard Mr. Dale's horse and buggy coming. Just in the rear of Dr. Alexander's stable he met the horse and stopped him. Mr. Dale was leaning over against the dash board. Mr. Brungart called Mr. Alexander and they at once discovered that Dale was dead.

They did not at that time suspect foul play but thought he died of natural cause. They got the body to the house as soon as possible and summoned Dr. Lee. The body was still warm but Josiah Dale was beyond all human aid. He probably died but a short time before.

Rearick Brothers, the undertakers, were called in to prepare the body for burial. On undressing him they found an awful gaping wound under the left shoulder blade. It was plainly a gun shot wound. The doctors began to probe the wound and a number of small shot were extracted. The light buggy in which Dale was driving was then examined and it was found that the shot which killed Dale had first passed through the back of the buggy seat making a hole similar to the one in the unfortunate man's back. Paper wads rom the gun were also found in the buggy All this indicates that the one who fired the shot was close to the buggy and he fired at Dale from behind. Dale who is hard of hearing probably never heard his assassin approaching and never knew what struck him. His faithful horse carried him home.

At first the theory was advanced that the shooting was accidental, being the work of some hunter. It was further borne out by the story that a bear was seen on the Nittany mountain and gunners have been on the lookout for Bruin. But this does not seem possible it was dark when Mr. Dale left the farm to drive to his home, and it was evident that who ever fired the shot was close to the buggy when the deed was done and could not have mistaken a man driving along a road in a horse and buggy for a bear. And hunters are not usually hunting after dark.

Josiah Dale was married to a daughte of the late Peter Hoffer, of Centre Hall, who survives him with one son, Hoffer Dale a student in the Jefferson Medical College at Philadelphia.

LATER.

The latest developments in regard to the shooting of Josiah Dale on Nittany Mountain Monday night plainly indicate that a deliberate murder was perpetrated. The authorities are making a thorough investigation and it is claimed have some very strong clues to work upon.

Coroner P. S. Fisher, of Zion, with the assistance of Dr. M. J. Locke, of Bellefonte, held an inquest and post-mortem examination Tuesday morning. It was discovered that No. 6 shot was used and smokeless powder. It is estimated that 265 shot were in the charge. All the arteries leading to the heart were cut off, some of the shot piercing the heart. Two of his ribs were broken.

Coroner Fisher empaneled a jury as follows: James W. Runkle, Dr. G. W. Hosterman, G. W. Bushman, Maurice J. Runkle, S. W. Smith and J. J. Arney. Quite a number of witness were examined among the number being Mrs. Moyer, wife of Mr. Dale's farmer. The jury have not yet returned their verdict and will not do so until Saturday.

The funeral of Mr. Dale took place this morning at 10 o'clock from his late residence. He was a member of the Presbyterian church and of the Centre Hall Lodge of Masons. Interment in the Centre Hall cemetery.

P. R. R. Employes' Raise.

The following notice has been issued from the office of Superintendent C. A. Preston, of the middle division, P. R. R:

"Altoona, Nov. 7, 1906.

All Employes Middle Division:

Taking effect December 1st, 1906, an advance of 10 per cent. will be made in the wages of all employes permanently in the service of the Pennsylvania railroad system east of Fittsburg and Erie, who are now receiving less than $200 per month. By order of the General Superintendent.

C. A. Preston, Superintendent."

Such notice as this are highly appreciated by the employes, and to many it will come at a time when badly needed. The actual necessities of life have increased so rapidly during the past five years that this raise in wages will be all the more appreciated by the faithful men who are to receive the remembrance. The increase will be felt first in the January checks.

This pleasant news follows a recent special meeting of the P. R. R. board of directors, at which the increase was authorized. The directers state: "The board takes this action by reason of the increased cost of living and the present great prosperity of the country in which the Pennsylvania shares, and which has made it possible for the company to make an increased distribution to its shareholders."

On the Pennsylvania lines east and west of Pittsburg a total of 192,000 men are employed. Of these, on the lines east, the wages of 125,440 men will be affected, the total increase amounting to $702,952 per month.

To Meet in Charming home.

In the court of the Pennsylvania conference of the Daughters of the American Revolution, to be held at Clearfield Tuesday and Wednesday of this week the delegates went to Curwensvill and were the delighted guests of their charming state regent, Mrs. Alexander Ennis Patton. Besides presiding at the conference, Mrs. Patton on Tuesday evening, served to her guests at her attractive home. 'Terrace Villa, a buffet supper.

Mrs. Donald McLean, president general; Mrs. Edgar H. Ogden, regent, and Mrs. Frank H. Getchell. vice regent of Philadelphia chapter, and several other prominent women will be the guests of Mrs. Patton and enjoy the hospitality of "Terrace Villa" during the conference. Among the important questions to be discussed will be the purchase of Fort Augusta at Sunbury and the progress of Memorial Continental hall at Washington.

In honor of Mrs. McLean a reception will be held by the Susquehanna chapter at the Dimeling hotel in Clearfield at 8 p. m. on Wednesday.

Mother's Heart Broken, Dies on Girl's Grave.

Mrs. Sylva C. Mining, of Plum township, Franklin county, died Saturday of a broken heart. Three years ago her daughter, Mrs. Anna Grove, met her death under unusual circumstances, and since she has been inconsolable.

Though the graveyard was two miles distant, she visited it several times a week. She went there Saturday morning and placed a bouquet on the grave. Two hours later she was found beside the grave unconscious. Friends removed her to her sister's home, where she died of a broken heart soon afterward, never having regained consciousness.

GEN. SHAFTER IS DEAD!

Retired Army Officer Succumbs to Pneumonia.

HE SERVED IN CUBA

Passed Away at the Ranch of his Son-in-Law Near Bakersfield, California--Rose From Farmer's Boy to Major General.

A BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCH OF HIS LIFE.

Bakersfield, Ca., Nov. 13.—Major General William Rufus Shafter, U. S. A., retired, died at the ranch of Captain W. H. McKittrick, his son-in-law, 20 miles south of this city, after an illness of seven days, despite the best medical attention available in California.

While returning from the pools on Tuesday, November 6, General Shafter contracted a severe chill, which augmented a slight indisposition and necessitated confinement to his bed. Dr. T. W. Mitchell, the family physician, was summoned. The patient failed to improve, and Dr. A. Schafer was called for consultation. Intestinal obstruction was discovered, but it was determined that this was a secondary affliction brought on by an acute attack of pneumonia.

Through it all the veteran bore up bravely. Cheerful and hopeful, though fully cognizant of his critical condition, the general remained conscious until Monday morning. Pure oxygen performed a great work in keeping life up, but after midnight constant weakening was discerned. Dr. Mitchell and the trained nurses labored unstringly, but the general lapsed into unconsciousness and remained in that condition until death. Captain and Mrs. McKittrick, the general's son-in-law and daughter; Miss Edmunds, a niece and Captain James N. Shafter, a brother, were at the bedside when the end came.

Sketch of Major General W. R. Shafter.

The son of a pioneer farmer, Major General William R. Shafter was born in Galesburg, Mich., October 16, 1835. With scant educational opportunities, he toiled on his father's fram until he attained his majority. By that time he had saved sufficient money to carry him through the winter term at the Prairie seminary. He returned to agricultural pursuits, but the monotony of a farmer's life was irksome to his ambitious spirit, and the outbreak of the civil war found him ready and eager to become a soldier.

At the first opportunity that presented Shafter tendered his services as a private. He was commissioned first lieutenant in Company I of the Seventh Michigan Infantry. He was mustered into service a few days after the repulse of the Federal troops at Bull Run, and from that time until his retirement, July 1, 1901, he was in the military service of the United States.

In the summer of 1862 the 19th Michigan Regiment was organized and Shafter was assigned to it, with the rank of major. The regiment joined the western army, and for a year or more saw a great deal of hard service in Kentucky and Tennessee. Together with other Federal officers, he was captured by the Confederates, but his gallantry in battle had been so conspicuous that his captors allowed him to retain his horse and side arms. He was a prisoner of war for three months and was exchanged in May, 1863.

He was promoted by President Hayes, in 1879, to be colonel of the First Infantry, and he held that rank for about 18 years. During nearly all of this time he was in command of the troops at Angel Island, Cal.

On May 3, 1897, Colonel Shafter was promoted to be brigadier general of the United States army, and was assigned to the command of the Department of the Columbia. Soon afterward he was transferred to the Department of California, becoming the department commander at the same station where he had for so many years been post commandant.

With the development of plans for the invasion of Cuba, after the war with Spain began in 1898, the president and secretary of war began to look about for suitable leaders. Prominent among the eligibles was General Shafter. President McKinley made him a major general of volunteers on May 4, 1898, and he was assigned to command the troops in the Santiago campaign.

Shafter was put in command, and he conducted the Santiago campaign in an original and peculiar style. He is a big man and has long been afflicted with the gout, and he ordered the advance on Santiago while lying at ease in a transport off the landing place, far from the enemy's guns. According to the accounts of President Roosevelt and others present in the field, he ordered the men to march through the chaparral under the murderous fire of the Spaniards, and but for the good judgment of the officers in command our army would have suffered ignoble defeat and terrible loss of life. They concluded to ignore Shafter's orders and proceeded on their own plans, preventing further serious loss and gaining such advantages that the Spaniards, under General Toral, were forced to surrender.

At the close of the war General Shafter was congratulated by President McKinley, and was sent to the Presidio as commander of the Department of California, and to superintend the dispatch of troops to Manila.

October, 1899, General Shafter went on the retired list of the regular army, having reached the prescribed age of 64 years. He, however, remained in command of the Department of the Pacific until July 1, 1901, when enlistment of Spanish war volunteers expired. He retired with the rank of major general.

JOHN SPANGLER.

Former Sheriff of Centre County Dies at Centre Hall.

John Spangler, one of Centre counties leading and substantial citizens, died at his home in Centre Hall Friday morning at three o'clock after an illness of several weeks duration. Death was due to a general break down of the system incident to old age. He was the father of Col. J. L. Spangler, of this place.

The deceased was born in Snyder county, Pennsylvania, March 18, 1828 and was the son of Jacob and Mary Schroyer Spangler. John Spangler could attend school but irregularly during boyhood for his services were required on his father's farm until he was eighteen years of age. He learned the blacksmith trade in Middleburg, Snyder county. On April 1, 1862 he came to Centre Hill where he rented a blacksmith shop and also kept a tavern.

After two years he came to Centre Hall and went into the hotel business where he remained up until 1879 with the exception of a short time at Millheim where he conducted the "Kreamer Hotel" In the fall of 1879 he was elected Sheriff of Centre county on the Democratic ticket and took his seat January 1, 1879 serving three years. He made an excellent Sheriff and retired with the good will of everyone. After retiring from office he engaged in different pursuits, including cattle dealing, butchering and farming. Of late he has been living a retired life.

On April 25, 1848 in Snyder county he was married to Miss Susanna Barger, who survives him with three sons, Col. J. L., and Howard J., of Bellefonte, and Reuben B., who is manager for a coal company in Cambria county.

In political adherency Mr. Spangler was a staunch democrat. He was also a member of the Lutheran church and at one time of the Odd Fellows and Masonic fraternities.

The funeral took place Monday morning at 11 o'clock in the Lutheran church at Centre Hall, Rev. Rearick officiated. Interment in the Lutheran cemetery.

An Early Wedding.

A very pretty wedding was celebrated early Wednesday in St. John's Catholic church. The contracting parties were Daniel P. O'Leary, formerly of this place but now of Bellwood, and Miss Alice E. Stover, youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. Fall Stover, of this place. The ceremony took place at high mass at 7:30 o'clock and was performed by the pastor of the church Rev. Patrick McArdle. The bride was attended by Miss Cordelia McNally and the best man was Lawrence O'Leary, a brother of the groom. The church was well filled with friends of the popular young couple.

After the ceremony a delightful wedding breakfast was served at the home o Mr. Joseph Wise, and later Mr. and Mrs. O'Leary left on a wedding trip to Philadelphia and Washington, D. C. They will make their future home in Bellwood where the groom is employed as a machinist.

The Falling Star.

Exactly seventy-three years ago Tuesday night occurred in this latitude what is in history known as the "falling stars," a meteoric display not seen since that time. There are a few residents of Bellefonte who remember that occurrence and can quite vividly described it and assert that it was one of the grandest sight in the skies human beings can imagine.

TEACHERS INSTITUTE

The Sixtieth Annual Gathering of the Pedagogues.

IN THE COURT HOUSE

Dr. Charles C. Miller, Prof. Chas. H Albert, Hon Henry Houck and Prof A Reist Rutt Among the Instructors

A MOST SUCCESSFUL WEEK'S WORK

The Sixtieth annual session of the Centre County Teachers Institute opened in the Court House, Bellefonte, Monday afternoon at 2 o'clock. The afternoon had been taken up by enrolling the different teachers and receiving their dues. When County Superintendent David O. Etters called the Institute to order there was a large and enthusiastic audience composed of teachers from all parts of the county, in addition to many spectators from the town and county.

The officers of the Institute are President, D. O. Etters; Vice Presidents, F. M. Pletcher and W. P. Hosterman; Secretary, Miss Mary E. Penny; Enrolling Clerks, E. J. Williams and W. S. Holter; Ticket Agent, Jones E. Wagner; Doorkeepers, T. L. Moore and H. W. Loneberger.

The different committees appointed for Institute week are as follows:

Resolutions—Messrs. J. S. Hosterman, ch., F. E. Pray, H. B. Bottenhorn and Misses Eva Moyer, Bertha Dock.

Legislation—Messrs. C. T. Gramley, ch., C. D. Koch, H. C. Rothrock, Z. M. Pletcher.

Elections—Messrs. Jos. C. Weirick, ch. J, C. Fox, M. T. Zabler.

Educational Daplay—John D. Meyer, ch., Misses Dora Reece, Alice E. Buck, Alice K. Dorworth.

Ushers—Messrs. Harry Crain, ch., Milan P. Walker, Chas. P. Barnes, B. Frank Steel, Roy M. Farber, B. R. Clark, H. S. Biddle, Cyrus Hutton, James M. Lewis, W. H. Haney, R. H. Kreider, C. E. Furst, A. R. Everette.

Auditing—Messrs. A. A. Pletcher, ch., N. N. Hartswick, G. E. Ardery.

Teachers' Reading Course—Messrs. C. D. Koch, ch., J. E. Wagner, H. C. Rothrock, F. M. Pletcher, H. B. Bottenhorn, R. U. Wasson.

Permanent Certificates—Messrs. J. E. Wagner, C. D. Koch, W. P. Hosterman.

The musical instructor as usual is Prof. Philip H. Meyer, of Centre Hall, who opened the session with a song service. Miss Bessie H. Dorworth, presided at the piano.

The invocation exercises which included scripture reading and prayer, was conducted by Rev. Ambrose Schmidt, pastor of the Reformed church of Bellefonte.

The first speaker of the week was Dr. Charles C. Miller, president of Lima College. He is an eloquent and interesting talker. In opening he paid a tribute to Bellefonte and Centre county and to its great War Governor Andrew G. Curtin. Dr. Miller's subject was "The Lessons of Frisco" and he went to illustrate many good thoughts of value to teachers. In the evening Dr. Miller lectured on "Napoleon the Man of Destiny" and everyone who heard it pronounced it masterly eloquent and grand. As a word painter Dr. Miller is a wonder.

Prof. Chas. H. Albert, of Bloomsburg, Pa., occupied the last period of Monday afternoon with an interesting talk on Geographical topics.

TUESDAY MORNING.

Tuesday morning's devotional exercises were conducted by Rev. W. H. Spangler, pastor of the United Brethren church of Bellefonte. There was an excellent song service conducted by Prof. Meyer. An innovation of the morning was a whistling chorus led by Prof. Meyer which made quite a hit.

The first period of the morning was taken up by a practical talk on school work by Prof. Chas. H. Albert. It was quite interesting and instructive.

Dr. Miller than gave a delightful talk, his subject being "The Value of Time, or the Age of Young Men." Dr. Miller held the attention of his audience from start to finish.

As the week advances the sessions of the Centre County Teachers Institute seem to grow more interesting if possible—and the Court house is crowded morning and afternoon.

On Tuesday afternoon Dr Miller entertained the Institute with a very brilliant talk on "Africa—The Land of Extremes." He illustrated his remarks with a map of Africa. He closed with a great tribute to the missionaries and the Christian civilization which are doing so much to open up the dark continent.

Tuesday evening it was expected that DeWitt Miller would deliver his lecture on "The Reveries of a Bachelor," but late in the afternoon a telegram was received stating his inability to be present owing to sickness. His place was filled by Prof. Charles H. Albert who delivered a very interesting an eloquent lecture.

Wednesday morning the Court house was crowded as usual. The devotional exercises were conducted by Rev. J. H. Stine, pastor of the Methodist church of Bellefonte.

Dr. Charles C. Miller gave a very eloquent talk on "Blennerhassett and Aaron Burr." In the afternoon Dr. Miller talked on "How to Teach a Great Poem."

Prof. Albert gave an interesting talk Wednesday morning on school work generally.

On Wednesday afternoon Dr. Henry Houck gave a lecture on Travels in the Orient (A Trip to Jerusalem). Dr. Houck has just been elected Secretary of Internal Affairs and he received quite an ovation. His address was a great treat. He actually carried his hearers with him on his great trip to the east.

A SUDDEN DEATH.

Harry K. Condo Alone With his Wife and Infant Child When he Expired

From Saturday's York Dispatch, we glean the following particulars of the sudden death of Harry K. Condo, formerly of Bellefonte.

Harry K. Condo, 456 West King street, a clerk at the clothing store of Isaac Walker & Son, died suddenly Friday night at his home in the presence of his young wife and infant child. Death was due to organic heart trouble, aggravated by a sudden attack of acute indigestion and came so suddenly that Mrs. Condo had no opportunity to summon assistance before her husband was dead.

Mr. Condo came home from the store Friday evening in the best of health. Later in the evening he went to a nearby restaurant for several oyster and toogue sandwiches which he shared with his wife. They then went to bed but lay awake awaiting the return of Mrs. Condo's mother, Mrs. W. H. Runkle, who had gone to the theater with their eldest son, Harry, a boy of four years.

Mrs. Condo says that she and her husband were talking cheerfully over plans for Christmas and it was shortly after 10 o'clock when he was seized with the attack which ended his life. He was lying in bed resting his head upon his left arm, and with his right stretched across his wife and resting on the cradle of their seven-months-old child, Fred. Suddenly without any warning Mr. Condo gasped, and before he could utter a word died, Mrs. Condo ran crying for assistance but the neighbors who responded found that there was nothing left to do but comfort the broken hearted wife.

Mr. Condo was 27 years, 6 months and 17 days old. He is a son of ex-Sheriff J. P. Condo, of Aaronsburg, Centre county, and has many friends in the city. He was of robust physique and his death comes as a shock to all who knew him. He is survived by his wife, who was Miss Pearl Runkle, and their two young children, Harry and Fred. The funeral was held on Monday afternoon.

Teachers Can Mourn one Day and Get Paid.

If you are a public school teacher you will be interested in the new by-law of the Board of Education providing that a large assortment of your relatives may die, and you may attend the funerals without loss of salary.

If a teacher's wife, no mention is made of husband, or their daughter, father, mother, sister, brother, grandfather, grandmother, uncle, aunt, nephew or niece dies, he or she will be excused from attending school for a day, and that without loss of pay. The only restriction is that the uncles, aunts, nephews and nieces must live in the same house with the teacher, if that mourner is to receive the concession.

It took the Committee on By-laws and Rules a long time to settle the difficulty, but the new ruling was finally approved Tuesday.

SUBDUED LIGHTS.

Fry Colored Shades For Toning Down the Trying White Glare.

Women who pride themselves on having artistic homes are selecting neutral and subdued shades for shielding the glare of the trying white light in an effort to get becoming and restful tones.

Few women will be subjected to an awful greenish glare, a purple hue or even pale blue rays at any time, for careful housekeepers realize the advantage of having a soft shade of light to give a desirable tone to the surroundings as well as to make the most of their personal appearance, and for this reason delicate shades of yellow, pink and rose will be found ingeniously twisted around almost all the electric light bulbs in an apartment, particularly in the dining room, where a glaring or trying light frequently causes untold discomfort to the nerves of guests, besides making them look unreal and often ghastly.

The strong light will be toned down by a ground glass or silk shield that has recently been invented. Those made of glass are screwed to the fixtures beneath the light and usually fit inside the globe. They really add to the appearance, because, being of glazed glass, the inside view of the framework is shut out.

Those made of sheer silk are round, or of whatever shape will fit the bottom of the globe. They should be fitted to a fine wire frame that can easily be fastened to the fixture. The silk, of course, is put on smooth, so that, while the light is softened, it is not dim.

In a dining room the artistic scheme is to have all the light concentrated on the table, leaving the rest of the apartment in subdued shadows. This is readily accomplished by placing the lights directly above or right on the table. Candelabra dropped from the ceiling are most frequently used above dining tables and are sufficiently high not to interfere with the placing of floral decorations in the center. The glare from these lights is softened before it falls on the white linen, sparkling cut glass and shining silverware by placing a shield of glass or thin silk beneath the bulbs and around the edges of the globe. It should be of light yellow, pale pink or red if the desire is to get a becoming light.

POINTED PARAGRAPHS.

How soon we learn that the average man's bark is about all there is to him.

When people say anything good about you, ever notice what a few are present?

We all of us claim to be natural, but we all of us know that the only time when we are not putting on is when we are asleep.

Somehow the hundred dollars some other man has always looks larger and as if it should go further than the hundred dollars you have.

There are not many sights more depressing than to meet a farmer's wagon on a country road going out from town with a coffin in it.

Every Two Minutes

Physicians tell us that all the blood in a healthy human body passes through the heart once in every two minutes. If this action becomes irregular the whole body suffers. Poor health follows poor blood; Scott's Emulsion makes the blood pure. One reason why is such a great aid is because it passes so quickly into the blood. It is partly digested before it enters the stomach; a double advantage in this. Less work for the stomach; quicker and more direct benefits. To get the greatest amount of good with the least possible effort is the desire of everyone in poor health. Scott's Emulsion does just that. A change for the better takes place even before you expect it.

Do You Want to Know What You Swallow?

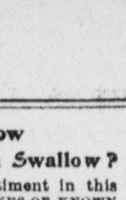
There is a growing sentiment in this country in favor of MEDICINES OF KNOWN COMPOSITION. It is but natural that one should have some interest in the composition of that which he or she is expected to swallow, whether it be food, drink or medicine.

Recognizing this growing disposition on the part of the public, and satisfied that the fullest publicity can only add to the well-earned reputation of his medicines, Dr. R. V. Pierce, of Buffalo, N. Y., has "taken time by the forelock," as it were, and is publishing broadcast a list of all the ingredients entering into his leading medicines, the "Golden Medical Discovery" the popular liver invigorator, stomach tonic, blood purifier and heart regulator; also of his "Favorite Prescription" for weak, over-worked, broken-down, nervous and invalid women.

This bold and out-spoken movement on the part of Dr. Pierce, has, by showing exactly what his well-known medicines are composed of, completely disarmed all harping critics who have heretofore unjustly attacked them. A little pamphlet has been compiled, from the standard medical authorities of all the several schools of practice, showing the strongest endorsements by leading medical writers of the several ingredients which enter into Dr. Pierce's medicines. A copy of this little book is mailed free to any one desiring to learn more concerning the valuable, native, medicinal plants which enter into the composition of Dr. Pierce's medicines. Address Dr. Pierce as above.

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets are tiny, sugar-coated anti-bilious granules. They regulate and invigorate Stomach, Liver and Bowels. Do not beget the "pill habit," but cure constipation. One or two each day for a laxative and regulator, three or four for an active cathartic. Once tried always in favor.

$50,000 GIVEN AWAY, in copies of The People's Common Sense Medical Adviser, a book that sold to the extent of 500,000 copies a few years ago, at $1.50 per copy. Last year we gave away $30,000 worth of these invaluable books. This year we shall give away $50,000 worth of them. Will you share in this benefit? If so, send only 21 one-cent stamps to cover cost of mailing only for book in stiff paper covers, or 31 stamps for cloth-bound. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.



THE TAIL OF A COMET.

Its Ever Changing Mass and Why It Flees From the Sun.

The tail of a comet is not formed of the same particles which composed it yesterday or even an hour or a moment ago. It is constantly being renewed at the expense of the nucleus. As the long stream of black smoke from the neighboring factory or mill is being continually renewed by fresh particles of carbon released by the combustion going on in the furnace below, so is the wonderful luminous train of cometary bodies being constantly replenished by particles flying from or rather driven from the nucleus by the intense heat of the sun.

Then, again, how infinitely small and how intensely luminous must these particles that go to make up the tail of a comet be! This thought is suggested by the fact that it has been proved that in some cases the nucleus of comets which are only a few hundred miles in diameter will have enormous fanlike tails stretching across space for a distance exceeding 200,000,000 miles and having a bulk exceeding that of the sun by more than 10,000 times! Professor E. E. Barnard beautifully illustrates the formation of a comet's tail by "supposing" thus: "Suppose, for example, that the nucleus of a comet is composed of ice. Then suppose the heat of the sun to be so intense as to rapidly melt that portion of the ice globe exposed to the action of its rays, which are strong enough to immediately convert it into vapor, which ascends toward the sun.

"Imagine now a fierce wind blowing out from the sun, causing the vapor which meets it to be whirled out into space behind the comet. This will clearly illustrate the theory of the formation of a comet's tail, only that the nucleus of the comet is not ice and the vapor is not water vapor, neither is the force which drives it away from the sun a fierce wind."

The unknown force hinted at by the astronomer above quoted readily explains why a comet's tail, as a rule, points in an opposite direction to the sun. The Russian astronomer Bredichen distinguishes three different types of cometary tails—those composed of particles having the specific gravity of hydrogen, those having the specific gravity of hydrocarbon gas and a third class having all the peculiarities of an equal mixture of hydrogen and iron vapor.

Cast Iron.

Cast iron is extended the five thousand five hundredth part of its length for every ton of direct stram per square inch of its section. Its elasticity is fully excited when extended the one-thousandth part, and the limit of its elasticity is estimated to be found at the time when it is extended the one thousand two hundredth part of its length. The tensile strength of the longest piece of cast iron ever tested was 45,970 pounds to the square inch.

Sleeping With Open Eyes.

All fishes which sleep do so with their eyes open, as they are not provided with eyelids and cannot therefore close their eyes. From experiments made it was discovered that some fishes have no preference for the nighttime, but sleep equally well during the day. They may be observed resting quite motionless for periods, apparently in sleep, except that, having no eyelids, they are unable to close their eyes or exclude all influence from without. The hare also sleeps with its eyes open, for the simple reason that its eyes are unprovided with eyelids. Instead of these there is a thin membrane which covers the eye when asleep. This membrane, as in the case of certain birds, folds like a curtain in the corner of the eye and by an instantaneous action flies back when sight is required, leaving the eye immediately and fully open for the exercise of sight. Some birds, such as the eagle, also have this membrane, which, when at rest, lies in the corner of the eye, folded up like a drawn curtain.

THE AGILE TIGER.

He Is "Shod With Silence" and Is as Quick as Lightning.

Most wild animals are specialists—that is to say, they are highly developed in one particular direction. The tiger is great as a stalker. His feet seem to be "shod with silence." R. H. Elliot, for many years a resident of India, cited an experience of one of his neighbors illustrative of this point.

He had been much annoyed by tigers and at last tied a bullock out in a clearing and took up his own position in a tree to wait till the tiger should come after the bait. The ground was covered with dried leaves, which in hot weather are so brittle that even the walking of a bird over them can be heard for a good distance.

In no very long time a large tiger slipped out of the forest and slowly edged toward the bullock. His method was so elaborate and careful that the man who saw it used to declare that it would have been worth 1,000 rupees to any young sportsman to have witnessed it.

So carefully did he put down each paw and so gradually did he crush the leaves under it that not a sound was to be heard. Between him and the bullock was a stump about four feet high, with long projecting surface roots. This, plainly, the tiger looked upon as a godsend.

He got upon one of the roots, balanced himself carefully and so was able to walk quickly and silently as far as the stump. He approached so gradually and noiselessly and his color against the brown leaves was so invisible that he was close upon the bullock before he was perceived.

Then instantly the bullock charged. The tiger eluded him and in a moment more had his paws on the bullock's neck ready to drag him down. Then, like a flash, he caught sight of the rope by which the bullock was tied and turned and sprang into the forest, all so quickly that the man in the tree had no opportunity to fire.

SIZE OF A THUNDERBOLT.

Geologists Have a System by Which Such Measures Are Taken.

"Did you ever see the diameter of a lightning flash measured?" asked a geologist. "Well, here is the case which once inclosed a flash of lightning, fitted it exactly, so that you can see how big it was. This is called a 'fulgarite,' or 'lightning hole,' and the material it is made of is glass.

"When a bolt of lightning strikes a bed of sand it plunges downward into the sand for a distance less or greater, transforming simultaneously into glass the silica in the material through which it passes. Thus by its great heat it forms a glass tube of precisely its own size.

"Now and then such a tube, known as a fulgarite, is found and dug up. Fulgarites have been followed into the sand by excavations for nearly thirty feet. They vary in inferior diameter from the size of a quill to three inches or more, according to the 'bore' of the flash. But fulgarites are not produced alone in sand. They are found also in solid rock, though very naturally of slight depth, and frequently existing as a thin, glassy covering on the surface.

"Such fulgarites occur in astonishing abundance on the summit of Little Ararat, in Armenia. The rock is so soft and porous that blocks a foot long can be obtained, perforated in all directions by little tubes filled with bottle green glass formed from the fused rock.

"Some wonderful fulgarites were found by Humboldt on the high Nevada de Toluca, in Mexico. Masses of the rock were covered with a thin layer of green glass. Its peculiar shimmer in the sun led Humboldt to ascend the precipitous peak at the risk of his life."

It Won For Sardou.

It is a singular fact that the famous French dramatist Sardou owed his first success on the boards to his excellent handwriting. He had sent in his often rejected play, "La Taverne des Etudiants," to the Odeon management for consideration, and the manuscript was thrown, with some others, upon a table. One day at rehearsal the charming actress Mlle. Berengere was attracted by the handwriting and took up the manuscript, crying, "Oh, what an exquisite hand!" She read the play and recommended it so strongly to the directors that they were induced to read it and then accept it. At the time Sardou was starving. He had gone through seven long years of terrible hardship and privation.

Hops In England.

The English were taught the uses of hops by a native Artois, who introduced them into England in 1524. They met with some hostility, for physicians represented them as unwholesome, and parliament was petitioned against them as a "wicked weed." In 1528 their use was prohibited under severe penalties. Henry VIII. appears to have been prejudiced against hops, for in a manuscript, dated Eltham, January, 1530, occurs an injunction to his brewer "not to put hops or brimstone" into the ale.

The Flying Lizard of Java.

The curious little animals known as flying lizards (Draco volans) are only found in Java, and their strange appearance is supposed to have been the origin of the dragon of the mediaeval eastern imagination. The reptile is like an ordinary lizard, but is provided with folds of extensible skin which are spread out by the long ribs and enable the animal to glide through the air from tree to tree in pursuit of the insects on which it preys. When lying prone on the mottled surface of a bough, it is an excellent example of "protective resemblance," as it is most difficult to be seen unless it moves.

A SATISFYING STORY.

It Worked Both Ways In Behalf of the Congressman.

Some years ago there came to Washington a representative in congress from Iowa who was an ardent champion of the cause of prohibition.

One day a friend from home dropped in to see the congressman. During the course of his stay he had occasion to use his pocketknife, which the representative much admired. This knife had in it a hook, "designed," so the friend said, "to remove stones that might become fastened in a horse's hoof on a rocky road." Finally, seeing the intense admiration of the congressman for the knife, the friend gave it to him. When the statesman had reached home and had shown the gift to his wife she laughed.

"John," said she, "any man who has served three terms in the state senate, been lieutenant governor and had two terms in congress must be a pretty good man if he doesn't know a champagne opener from a hoof cleaner."

Somehow the story got out and was copied by nearly every newspaper in Iowa. One day the congressman met the newspaper man whom he understood to be the author of the first squib in the matter.

"You did me a great service," smilingly said the representative to the correspondent. "All the prohibitionists are taking my wife's view of my ignorance, and all the 'antis' are insisting that I'm a devil of a good fellow for imposing so successfully on my wife. It works in my behalf whichever way you take it." — Saturday Evening Post.

CLOTHES IN KOREA.

Changed According to the Calendar and Not the Weather.

A characteristic of the Koreans which has helped to their undoing as a nation was the fact that they were guided wholly by precedent. When a new situation prese... they did not cope with it in the ligh... the day they were living, but were guided entirely by the old saws and the ancient maxims of wise men who had been dead a thousand years or so. A striking illustration of this national trait was furnished in the matter of their wearing apparel, which was changed according to an ancient calendar and without any regard to the temperature of the day.

Korea is a land of great extremes of heat and cold, and the man who drafted the calendar by which all clothing is changed, though a Chinese sage, it is said, was not a success as a weather prophet, unless, as some maintain, the climate in the course of the hundreds of years which have elapsed has changed. When the calendar announces now begins the period of greatest cold the conservative Korean, although the air may be soft and balmy, pads out his white garments with six or seven thicknesses of cotton wadding, until the thin man becomes a fat man and the stout party swells up to such enormous size as to block up the streets when he walks, or, rather, rolls, abroad. Again, though spring and early summer may have come and the heat prevailing be almost tropical, the Korean swelters about in his wadded clothing in perspiring veneration of his hereditary calendar.—New York Herald.

BELLS AS BAROMETERS.

Their Tone Will Indicate What the Weather Will Be.

Church bells can serve another purpose besides ringing you to worship. They make a good substitute for a barometer. As the atmosphere is the sole conductor of sound from the bell to the ear, it is obvious that the intensity and quality of the sound as perceived by the ear will depend on the state of the medium through which it comes. For instance, if bells sound very distinctly of an evening, this points to the probability of a wet day following, since air heavily charged with moisture conducts sound better than dry air. So, too, as dense air conducts better than light air, bells sound more clearly when the barometer is high than when it is low, other things being equal, and so, too, with hot and cold air. These principles are familiar to all country folk living within the sound of church bells. About five miles from Lebekke, in Belgium, there are some small bells which are called "water bells." When they are heard distinctly in the town rain is sure to follow.—London Spectator.

An Amdavit.

The suggestion of an English barrister that a certain matter was a proper subject for oral examination, not for affidavit, agreed with the emphatic opinion of an English justice recently retired. He was once trying a case at the Manchester assizes in which a man had been cross examined upon an affidavit. Summing up the evidence to the jury, the judge said, "Gentlemen, of all the weapons in the whole armory of iniquity there is nothing to equal an affidavit for concealing the truth."

Didn't Need To.

"It's too bad," said the judge caustically, "that the defendant should have chosen you for counsel. You know nothing about law."

"Well, your honor," replied the young lawyer, "I don't need to in this court."—Philadelphia Press.

Long Mi...tes.

"Are you ready, dear?"

"In one minute, darling."

"Matrimony does not dispel all our illusions," he muttered as he lit a cigar. "Before we were married I thought every moment I had to wait for her was an eternity, and so it's turned out to be."—Baltimore American.

Health and Beauty.

Many women regard steaming as one of the most important aids to beauty, while others look upon it as a treatment altogether too severe for the face. But this is certain; with some skins it will not agree at all. Since the object of steaming is to open thoroughly the pores—on the order of a miniature Turkish bath—it is a good idea to accomplish this by some other means. One of the best substitutes is the use of hot water. First, wash the face thoroughly with soap. Then have a basin of very hot water ready and several small face towels. Wrinkles these out tightly in the hot water and apply to the face. As soon as one cools replace it with a hot one. This method of opening the pores is more convenient than steaming and not quite as heroic a treatment. After continuing it for about ten minutes, dry the face gently and rub in a good skin food or cream.

Sometimes the problem of cleaning the face is not an easy one. That sounds peculiar and yet a good many people do not know how to do it properly. The trouble usually is that the water is too hard, or the soap does not agree with the skin, or some like fault, small in itself, but large in its results. Many a woman begins her day with a clear conscience after having hastily scrubbed her face with soap—any kind, so it is soap—rinsed it and roughly wiped it dry with a towel. She treats it like a plate or cup.

Sometimes the best of soap disagrees with the skin. An excellent substitute is almond meal. It is good, too, to use in hard water. Dip a clean face cloth in hot water, then sprinkle a small amount of almond meal on it and wash the face as with soap and water. Rinse thoroughly.

Met After Forty Years.

A remarkable meeting took place at Freeland on Tuesday, when Nathan and George Beltz, brothers, who had been separated during the Civil war, met for the first time since then. The Beltz boys enlisted from Lansford, Carbon county, and at that time they agreed to return to Lansford should they live. At the close of the war Nathan arrived at his old home, but George had not put in an appearance and no trace of him could be found. After a time Nathan, while in Wilkes Barre, learned that his brother had been taken prisoner and wounded on a southern field. He immediately returned to Lansford, there to learn that George had been at home in the meantime and left again in search of his brother.

Thus they became separated, and although both have been traveling within a comparatively small area and for the past ten years been living in the same county, neither heard of the other until this week, when George, who lives at Wilkes-Barre and has a family, learned from another veteran's son that there was a bachelor living at Freeland who was in a precarious condition and known as Nathan Beltz.

George arrived at Freeland on Tuesday. The brothers recognized each other after a brief interview, and the scene that followed was pathetic. Nathan, now a physical wreck, carrying the Confederate bullets still, will be taken by the brother to the latter's home at Wilkes-Barre.

The Standard's Victory.

The rejoicing over the conviction of the Standard Oil company in Ohio for operating in restraint of trade was premature. The lines which could have been imposed upon the company would have aggregated $6,000,000, but the court feeling inclined to be merciful to the worst monopoly in the world, imposed a fine of $5,000. The court doubtless took into consideration the fact that if the total amount of fines were placed on the Standard the people who use oil would have had to pay the bill.

With the prospect that the Standard will be as leniently treated by other courts before which it shall be haled for violating the law the company can continue to violate the statutes, paying the penalty out of its profits without missing the money. With the courts inclined to take pity on the misfortunes of the Standard, which has a hard time of it crushing out opposition, there is a possibility of the people being sent to jail for daring to interfere with the Standard's efforts to make an honest living.

Have Confidence When He Tells You Pepsikola Tablets Do Cure Indigestion.

Possibly you may think our only reason for praising these tablets is because of the small profit we make on each 25 cent box, but how little satisfaction there would be in recommending a remedy that would disappoint you and thereby lose your trade.

This thing of selling a worthless article is mighty poor business policy. Square dealing always pays best and when we tell you what Pepsikola tablets will do, our confidence is based on our own personal experience in selling them here in Bellefonte year after year.

There isn't a remedy on this store that we recommend more highly and unless Pepsikola tablets really do what we claim for them how utterly useless our efforts would be.

For coated tongue, sour stomach, wind belching, fullness after eating, heart burn, sleeplessness, weakened energy, and other symptoms of indigestion we recommend them with every confidence and always refund the 25 cents should you fail to receive the benefits expected.

Clemenceau, New French Premier

Once a New York Physician and Teacher of French—His American Marriage. Elevation of Picquart to the Ministry.

GEORGES PICQUART.

THE changes made in the French cabinet have a special interest for people living on this side of the Atlantic. The retirement of M. Sarrien as premier of France and the promotion to that post of M. Georges Clemenceau mean the elevation to power of a statesman who resided for some time in this country and married an American woman. His most notable act since his accession to the premiership is the appointment as minister of war of a man in whom Americans have a peculiar interest, General Georges Picquart, the principal hero, next to Captain Dreyfus himself, of the episode in which that officer figured.

In France the office of president is one of great honor, but the powers that go with the position are by no means so great as those possessed by the president of our own republic. It is the premier who is the active ruler of the country in France, and hence the importance attached to the post. The political complexion of the government may change several times during the term of a French president, but the premier must always represent the party which controls the parliament.

M. Clemenceau assumes the reins of authority at a critical period in the history of France on account of the agitation over the new law separating church and state. There will be no change of policy on this subject because of his accession, for he was minister of interior in M. Sarrien's cabinet and his right hand man. The late premier resigned on account of ill health. He used to say, "Sarrien is the driver, but Clemenceau drives the driver." Indeed, Clemenceau has a reputation as a sort of Warwick, as a statesman who was able to make or unmake ministers at will, but who until now was unable to be premier himself.

M. Clemenceau was born sixty-five years ago and comes of an old Huguenot family of the province of Vendee.

The father of Premier Clemenceau was a strong republican, and the son was brought up with the idea that he must fight for his views as a member of the minority in his community. He was educated for the practice of medicine, but before he had had a chance to advance very far in his profession was compelled to leave the country on account of his radical views. This was just before the fall of the Emperor Napoleon III. Clemenceau removed to New York, and while trying to establish a practice in the French colony he for a time taught French. One of his pupils was a Miss Mary E. Plummer of Greenwich, Conn. He fell in love with her, and they were married in 1870 by Mayor A. Oakey Hall at the New York city hall. M. Clemenceau being averse to a religious ceremony. The outbreak of the Franco-Prussian war led to his return to France and rise to political influence and, indeed, pre-eminence, for he is by many considered the strongest man in France today. His marriage with an American proved unfortunate. His wife obtained a divorce, returned to America and died here.

By making General Georges Picquart his minister of war Premier Clemenceau heaps humiliation on the enemies of Dreyfus and elevates to the head of the department of war the latter's foremost champion. But a short time ago Dreyfus was disgraced and in exile and Picquart was in prison because of his adherence to a then unpopular cause. Now Captain Dreyfus is restored to rank, his good name is vindicated, and he wears the ribbon of the Legion of Honor, and Picquart, who suffered rather than witness an injustice in silence, has the disgraced Mercier's post as minister of war, while at the head of the cabinet is Clemenceau, who both as editor and statesman was one of the stanchest of the maligned captain's defenders.

He Wasn't Acrobatic.

Miss Prue Dent—Papa says you are improvident and that he will never consent to my marrying a man that is unable to make both ends meet. Orrville Harduppe—Well, I'm afraid I shall never be able to do so. I'm no contortionist. Good evening.—Pittsburg Dispatch.

The wise man is he who asks a great deal of advice and takes a very little of it.

He Made Sure.

A story is told of the Sudan railway which shows patient literalness. To an official there came the telegram from an outlying station: "Station master has died. Shall I bury him?" The reply was sent: "Yes; bury station master, but please make sure he is really dead before you do so." In due time back came the message: "Have buried station master. Made sure he was dead by hitting him twice on the head with a fish plate." There was perfect assurance that there had been no premature burial.

POINTED PARAGRAPHS.

Some people are simply acting natural when they are kicking.

Do the right thing by all of your friends, and you haven't anything but the core of the apple left.

People with real troubles do not care as much for sympathy as they do to have their trials as inconspicuous as possible.

When a man says that he has not a friend in the town where he lives you can depend on it that the town is not to blame.

Don't forget that your actions are measured as critically all through life as is the borrowed butter you return to a neighbor.

With all due consideration for the sober second thought, we notice that the longer we aim the more liable we are to miss the mark.—Atchison Globe

Hawaiian Huckleberry.

On the island of Hawaii are great thickets of the ohelo, or Hawaiian huckleberry (Vaccinium reticulatum), which the natives consider sacred to Pele, the goddess who is supposed to preside over the famous crater of Kilauea, and which, together with white pigs and chickens, are thrown by them into the boiling red lake during an eruption to appease the wrath of the aggressive dame and thus cause the rivers of lava to cease flowing on their destructive course. These berries grow in clusters on low bushes right on the very brink of the brimstone beds and are so numerous that a bushel may be easily gathered in half an hour. In appearance they somewhat resemble a cranberry, and the flavor is pleasantly suggestive of grapes.

Conundrums.

Why is a street car like raspberries? Because both get jammed.

When is a prisoner like a leaky boat? When being bailed out.

What kind of a horse has too many legs and yet never walks? The clothes-horse.

"Robbing Peter to Pay Paul."

This saying had its origin in the rivalry between St. Peter's cathedral, now Westminster abbey, and St. Paul's, when, in 1550, an appropriation was made from St. Peter's to make good a deficiency in the accounts of St. Paul's. Much opposition was shown to this, and it was for the time a popular outcry, "Why rob Peter to pay Paul?" The saying was revived as a proverb upon the death of William Pitt, earl of Chatham, in 1778. The city of London argued that so illustrious a statesman should be buried at St. Paul's, while parliament held that the remains of so great a leader should be placed with the dust of kings and that to bury him away from the Abbey of Westminster would be again a robbing of Peter to pay Paul.

One Sure Method.

There is a story of a medical student before a board of examiners to whom the question was put again and again of how he would produce perspiration in a patient. He proposed all sorts of things, to which one importunate examiner always replied:

"Well, and if that would not do?"

At last the poor young man, driven to his wits' end, exclaimed, "I would send him before this board to be examined, and I warrant that would make him perspire."

The Obstacle.

"I came near eloping once," said the sweet young thing.

"Indeed!"

"Yes. We had quite made up our minds."

"Who?"

"Papa and I, but I could not find a man who would elope with me."

Appropriate.

Charles—I don't see how Blank can make any money out of that tobacconist business of his. He's always smoking the best cigars himself. Fred—Oh, that's his method of advertising! Charles—How so? Fred—Why, puffing his goods.

Thousands Have Kidney Trouble and Don't Know it.

How To Find Out.

Fill a bottle or common glass with your water and let it stand twenty-four hours; a sediment or settling indicates an unhealthy condition of the kidneys; if it stains your linen it is evidence of kidney trouble; too frequent desire to pass it or pain in the back is also convincing proof that the kidneys and bladder are out of order.

What to Do.

There is comfort in the knowledge so often expressed, that Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great kidney remedy fulfills every wish in curing rheumatism, pain in the back, kidneys, liver, bladder and every part of the urinary passage. It corrects inability to hold water and scalding pain in passing it, or bad effects following use of liquor, wine or beer, and overcomes that unpleasant necessity of being compelled to go often during the day, and to get up many times during the night. The mild and the extraordinary effect of Swamp-Root is soon realized. It stands the highest for its wonderful cures of the most distressing cases. If you need a medicine you should have the best. Sold by druggists in 50c. and $1. sizes.

You may have a sample bottle of this wonderful discovery and a book that tells more about it, both sent absolutely free by mail, address Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y. When writing mention reading this generous offer in this paper.

Home of Swamp-Root.

Don't make any mistake, but remember the name Swamp-Root, Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, and the address, Binghampton, N. Y. on every bottle

CAMILLE CLIFFORD.

American Actress Who Has Wedded Prospective Peer.

Camille Clifford, the American actress who will some day become a peeress through her marriage to the Hon. Henry Lyndhurst Bruce, the eldest son of Lord Aberdare, recently succeeded to the role previously filled by Edna May in London's latest comic opera hit, "The Belle of Mayfair." Her marriage to the prospective British peer was secret on account of the opposition of the groom's family to the match. Previous to going on the stage she was known as Camilla Otterson and was born in Norway. When fifteen years old she ran away from her aunt in Christiania and came to the United States. She was "second maid" in a Boston family for a time and also worked in a laundry, but, being brought to the attention of Henry W. Savage, was given by him a place in "The Prince of Pilsen" company. Her beauty and charm did the rest. In London she created such a craze that she excited the jealousy of Edna May, who finally resigned from "The Belle of Mayfair" company in a pique. As the bride of a future peer she will have a new field to conquer—that of English society. She is considered a good specimen of the Gibson girl type in appearance and character and has the poise necessary for entrance to exclusive sets. Her husband's father has threatened him with disinheritance, but the young man is making money in a garage business and enjoys an income of $150,000 from his estates.

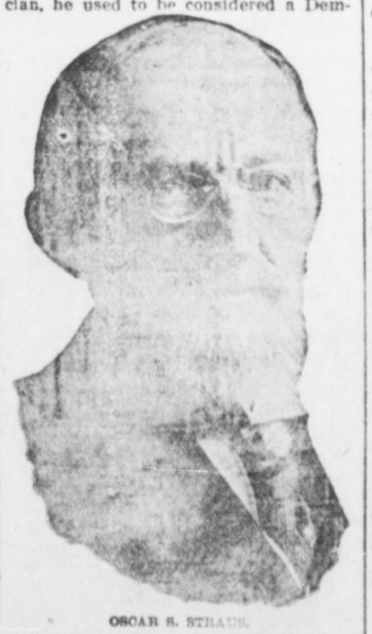
OSCAR S. STRAUS.

The First Jew to Enter an American Cabinet.

Oscar S. Straus, who is scheduled for appointment by President Roosevelt as secretary of commerce and labor, occasioned discussion recently by his statement that the Jewish race, to which he belongs, is not mercurial and materialistic, but devoted to ideals, and that otherwise it would have sold out long ago and bought peace from its persecutors. It is said that Mr. Straus will be the first Jew to hold a place in the cabinet of an American president. He has served as minister to Turkey and in that post did more, although a Jew, for the benefit of the work of the Christian missionaries in the sultan's domain than any of his Christian predecessors. It was Grover Cleveland who first sent Mr. Straus to Turkey, and the second time he went there as United States minister it was President McKinley who commissioned him. Though never an active politician, he used to be considered a Democrat.



OSCAR S. STRAUS.

Of late years he has voted the Republican ticket. He is best known as a diplomat, but in addition to his achievements in the field of diplomacy he has practiced law, written books on history and political economy and made a success in business. He is a member of The Hague peace tribunal.

Mr. Straus is a deep student of social problems, and in the Civic federation has employed his energies in bringing about a better understanding between capital and labor.

The prospective cabinet member was born in Germany in 1850, came to this country in childhood and is a graduate of Columbia university. He is president of the New York board of trade and transportation and of the American Social Science association.

WHAT THE KIDNEYS DO

There Unceasing Work Keeps Us Strong And Healthy.

All the blood in the body passes through the kidneys once every three minutes. The kidneys filter the blood. They work night and day. When healthy they remove about 500 grains of impure matter daily, when unhealthy some part of this impure matter is left in the blood. This brings on many diseases and symptoms—pain in the back, headache, nervousness, hot, dry skin, rheumatism, gout, gravel, disorders of the eyesight and hearing, dizziness, irregular heart, debility, drowsiness, dropsy, deposits in the urine, etc. But if you keep the filters right you will have no trouble with your kidneys.

W. R. Camp, of the firm of Kirk-Camp Furniture Co., Logan Ave. and 14th St., Tyrone, Pa., says: "Experience has taught me that Doan's Kidney Pills is an excellent remedy and one that strictly fulfills its promises. In the fall of 1897 I gave for publication in our local papers a statement covering my experience with this remedy and recommending it to others, and now in the month of June, 1904, I just as enthusiastically recommend it as I did at that time. Doan's kidney pills completely relieved me of an aching in the small of my back and lameness through the loins due to kidney trouble. We always keep this preparation in the house for use in case of need, and it has never failed to give splendid satisfaction. I heartily endorse it.

EARLE C. TUTEN.

Hicks for November.

A regular storm period is central on the 8th, extending from the 7th to the 12th. The Moon is in quadrature to the Earth and Sun, or at last quarter, on the 9th, the central day of the period. A hogeh-er this period promises much disagreeable and stormy weather, especially on the lakes and the Atlantic Ocean. Ordinarily it would terminate in a high barometer and cold wave about the 12th, but correct observation will prove that when a storm period is followed immediately by the Moon's passage of the celestial equator, or by a New Moon, storm conditions are prolonged, and cold wave and high barometer culminates are kept back. The Mercury period will help to bring about such results at this time.

A reactionay storm period is central on the 15th, 16th and 17th. The New Moon in perigee falls on the 15th, at a time when the full force of the Mercury equinox will blend with other perturbing causes One of the most severe disturbances of the month will culminate within forty-eight hours of noon on the 16. The barometer will drop to its lowest readings for the month, thick cloudiness and great humidity will prevail, and general storms of autumal, rain, turning to destructive sleet, and later into blizzardous snow and northwest gales may be expected, covering the northern and extending far into the central sections.

A regular storm period extends from the 19th to 23rd, with Moon at greatest south declination on the 19th and at first quarter, or quadrature with Earth and Sun on the 22nd. Sharp cold with frost and freezing toward the north, will visit most sections from about the 22nd to the 25th.

A regular storm period begins on the 29th and runs at least four days into December, being central December the 2nd. The full Moon falls on the 30th which fact will greatly tend to bring on the disturbances of this period on and touching that date.

A Spleudid Victory.

The campaign of defamation, falsehood and pretence waged by the allied enemies of the republican party ended with the closing of the polls and the result is a crushing defeat of the conspirators and the triumphant election of the entire republican ticket. The people of Pennsylvania took the measure of Lewis Emery, Jr., and his democratic champions quite accurately and have pronounced a fitting judgment upon one of the most outrageous conspiracies against the good name of the commonwealth and the reputation of good citizens ever inspired by ambition or revenge.

Edwin S. Stuart has been elected governor by a majority which may reach 100,000. All his colleagues have been elected with him. The pledges made by Mr. Stuart will be faithfully redeemed. He will be the governor of the whole people; he will honestly and faithfully serve their best interests. If there is anything wrong he will do his level best to have the wrong exposed and the wrong-doers punished, not a few days before an election and by public clamor, but in the ordinary course of business and by the courts of the state. In the meantime, Mr. Emery will not manage the affairs of the commonwealth and Charles Emory Smith will not succeed Senator Penrose in the United States senate.

Brown October.

An exchange spilled some poetic utterances about October, the month which left us only a short time ago, that sounds pretty good. Listen:

"'October is the autumn-kissed bridge between summer and winter, over which we all slowly and reluctantly wend our way. The birds have gone southward, the gains have been gathered, the squirrels have laid by their store, and we think that surely the storms of winter are about to break upon us, but then old October lengthens out our joy of living and doles out to us the delightful charms, one by one day by day, until we are almost willing to pronounce this the best month of all."

IMMIGRANTS CREMATED

Forty-Seven Persons Burned to Death In Wreck on B. & O.

45 BODIES CONSUMED BY FIRE

Passenger Train and Freight Collided At High Speed, and Victims Pinned In Debris Were Burned to Death in Sight of Rescuers.

Chicago, Nov. 13.—More than one-half the passengers on an immigrant train on the Baltimore & Ohio road were killed and injured in a collision between the passenger train and a freight near Woodville, Ind.

One hundred and sixty-five passengers were on the train. Of these 47 were either killed outright or were burned to death in a fire that broke out in the wreckage immediately after the collision. The names of all of the dead will probably never be known as 45 of the bodies were consumed in the flames or were so badly burned that identification will be out of the question.

Thirty-eight people were injured, and several of these will die. Eighty others escaped unhurt, but lost nearly all their baggage and clothing.

The disaster was caused by a blunder of some employe of the railroad company, but just where the blame lies has not as yet been determined. The passenger train, which was loaded with Russian Jews, Servians and Poles, all of them recent arrivals in this country, and bound for Chicago or places in the northwest, was the second section of a through train from Baltimore.

A light snow was falling, and as the freight was rounding a sharp curve just west of Woodville the second section of the immigrant train came in sight a short distance away, tearing toward Chicago at the rate of 40 miles an hour. The two trains came together with unslackened speed, and in the crash six passenger coaches and several freight cars were knocked into kindling wood, and, together with the locomotives, went rolling down the 10-foot embankment.

Fire broke out almost immediately in the wreckage, and although a number of the injured were saved by the desperate efforts of the train crew and surviving passengers, the greater part of those who were pinned down in the debris were burned to death. The flames spread through the wreckage so rapidly that it was impossible to save a number of people who were only slightly hurt, but were held fast by timbers that weighted them down. These were burned in plain sight of the throng that stood around the scene of the disaster, utterly unable to lend assistance in any way. The fire continued until all of the shattered cars were entirely consumed, and of the 47 people whose death followed the collision, 45 were burned to ashes. All of the six cars of the immigrant train were burned, as were three freight cars.

The depot in Chicago was crowded with men and women who had come to this country to escape the massacres in Russia, and who, after months of hard work, had saved enough to pay the passage of members of their families, and their grief, when they became aware that possibly all their sacrifice and effort had resulted only in the death of those whom they had sought to bring to them, was pitiful. Crowds of Russians and Poles waited aroung the depot all day for news from Woodville, and when a train came in bearing the 38 injured persons, all of whom were taken to Mercy hospital for treatment, it was with the greatest difficulty that the police were able to open a passageway for the wounded.

Five Men Shot and Killed.

Bluefields, W. Va., Nov. 13.—Tom Miller, a workman at the Mason & Munday railroad camp, shot and killed two companions during a dispute over a game of cards. After the shooting he escaped and the police have been given his description. Constable Bursault at the United States Coal and Coke company shot and killed three of the company's negroes. The men resisted arrest and the officer in order to protect himself was compelled to shoot them. The shooting was the result of a drunken brawl.

Burglar Kills Deputy Sheriff.

Poughkeepsie, N. Y., Nov. 13.—Deputy Sheriff Eugene Cribley, of Dover Plains, surprised a burglar at work in the office of the meat market of L. L. Colligan. When the deputy entered the office the burglar pulled his revolver and fired, killing Cribley instantly. The burglar disappeared without any plunder.

NUGGETS OF NEWS

All the building contractors of Mobile, Ala., have declared for the open shop basis.

William Auth, of Newark, N. J., shot and killed herself in Central Park, New York, while suffering from ill health.

Bert Seely, who was under suspicion of murder at Owosso, Mich., was found dead in bed, and beside him was his young wife, also dead.

A Michigan Central railroad engine ran away in Detroit, Mich., and crashed into the depot, killing one person and injuring several others.

The United States supreme court will take a recess from Monday, November 19, to Monday, December 3, over the Thanksgiving holidays.

RAILROADERS PRESS DEMANDS

Lackawanna Engineers Get Increase and Erie Firemen Vote to Strike.

New York, Nov. 13.—The scale of wages and the length of the work day were the issues at various meetings of grievance committees representing the engineers and firemen of several of the railroads centering at New York.

At a conference between President W. H. Truesdale, of the Delaware, Lackawanna & Western, and a committee of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, including Grand Chief Warren H. Stone, the engineers were granted a 10-hour day and increases in wages aggregating for the 900 engineers $30,000 to $35,000 a year.

Committees representing the engineers of the New York, New Haven & Hartford and the New York Central railways met to discuss the demands they are to make upon these two lines for higher wages and shorter hours of labor.

The poll of the locomotive firemen of the Erie railroad, which is being taken for the purpose of determining whether or not to resort to a strike in an endeavor to enforce their demands, according to Grand Master Hannahan, of the firemen's organization, resulted in an almost unanimous vote in favor of a strike, so far as returns have been received.

Switchmen Accept 4 Per Sent. Raise.

Pittsburg, Pa., Nov. 13.—Announcement was made that the switchmen had agreed to accept the advance of four cents per hour as offered last week in Chicago by the railroad officials, and it is asserted that there will be no strike. Representatives of the firemen and engineers met at the Seventh Avenue hotel in this city to discuss the wage question, but no definite action was taken.

$8,000,000 FOR NEW EQUIPMENT

Rock Island Railroad Places Large Orders For New Cars.

Shicago, Nov. 13.—The management of the Rock Island railroad, it was announced, has issued orders for new equipment to cost $5,000,000. This is 1 nadidtion to orders previously given this year aggregating $3,000,000. Included in the new equipment are 2000 40-ton box cars, 250 stock cars, 1000 ballast cars, 650 coal cars, 300 flat cars, 2540 hopper cars and nearly 100 passenger, postal and baggage cars. All the new passenger cars are to have steel underframe construction, and the new mail cars are to be all steel.

Pennsy Orders 550 New Cars.

Philadelphia, Nov. 13.—Six hundred steel passenger cars are to be built for the Pennsylvania Railroad company in the next year. Space for 550 cars has been reserved with the American Car & Foundry company, and 50 cars will be constructed at the Altoona shots of the railroad company. The total cost is estimated at $6,000,000. The order to the American Car & Foundry company will be divided so as to include coaches, baggage, express and mail cars. The company has also ordered 25 new freight engines. These will be built at the company's shops at Altoona.

N. J. RAILROAD TAX VALID

State Supreme Court Upholds Law Taxing Them at Local Rates.

Trenton, N. J., Nov. 13. — The supreme court rendered a decision holding to be constitutional the law of 1905 providing for the taxation of second class railroad property at local rates, familiarly known as the Duffield law. The court bases its conclusions on the former decisions with respect to taxation of railroad property.

The court also declared constitutional the law of 1879 providing for the appointment of a commission on the petition of 25 property owners to investigate the affairs of any county or municipality.

JOHN MITCHELL RENOMINATED

Mine Workers' Leader Will Not Retire From Union.

Indianapolis, Nov. 13.—All doubts as to whether President Mitchell intends continuing as president of the United Mine Workers of America or not have been set at rest by the announcement that Mr. Mitchell has been renominated for the office, and that he will permit his nomination to stand.

Terribly Burned by Molten Steel.

Youngstown, O., Nov. 13.—One man was killed, three fatally and two seriously injured in the explosion of a casting at the Youngstown Foundry and Machine company's plant. Michael Key, a furnace man, was terribly burned and was killed. The men were making a steel casting. They had filled a five-foot pipe mold with molten steel and were gathered around it when it burst with a terrific explosion. Molten steel was thrown all over the foundry and fell like rain on the men gathered around the casting.

One Way to Get a Persian Carpet.

A woman who accompanied her husband up the Khyber pass in Afghanistan tells how she saw a fine Persian carpet and coveted it. An assistant to their host went out and returning said: "My head man says the owner of the carpet is a wicked old man, who will not sell his carpet at any price, but he has gone for the night to sleep in a little village close by, which is beyond British boundary. He wants to know if he shall make a hole in the wall of the mud hut and steal it while the old sinner sleeps. Shall he walk in at once and kill him and take it? He will do whichever memsahib likes." Memsahib, however, discovered that she could live without the carpet after all.

TERRORIZED BY CRIME

Pittsburg Police Apppear Helpless To Check It.

ROBBED IN BROAD DAYLIGHT

Woman Assaulted On Crowded Street and Assailants Escaped—100 Extra Policemen Sworn In and Vigilance Committee Appointed.

Pittsburg, Pa., Nov. 13. — Emboldened by the apparent helplessness of the police and detective forces of the city the highwaymen and burglars that have terrorized this city for the last 10 days have apparently extended their operations into broad daylight, as well as working under cover of darkness. At 4 o'clock in the afternoon at the corner of Sixth avenue and Wood streets, one of the most crowded spots in the heart of the city, and within a few hundred feet of police headquarters, Mrs. A. G. Boykin was assaulted and robbed by two men, who made their escape. The men had been following the woman, according to her story, and as she turned the corner they separated. One hurried in front of her, while another walked immediately behind. The latter grabbed her about the waist, while the man in front wrenched her muff and purse from her hands and made off. She was thrown to the sidewalk and sustained severe bruises. After reporting the mater to the police Mrs. Boykin was taken home, where she is suffering from the injuries and shock. There is no clue to the assailants.

In the meantime trade and business organizations are holding indignation meetings and drawing up petitions to the mayor and the police officials. The murder of Harry Smith in the East End by burglars has aroused that section, and a meeting of the East End board of trade was held, at which a vigilance committee was appointed. A resolution warning citizens to arm themselves and recommending the purchase of several bloodhounds was presented to the board, and this was referred to the newly appointed committee for action.

Newspapers are offering rewards of $1000 for the arrest of each or any of the slayers of James A. McMillen, who was killed a week ago, or of Harry F. Smith.

A man who gave his name as Charles Bucini has been arrested, suspected of being the murderer of Smith. Bucini had been shot through the right hand, and it is supposed that he was wounded by Smith and dropped the revolver which is now in the possession of the police. In an effort to calm the community the police are withholding all the information possible.

At a meeting of select and common councils a message from Mayor Guthrie was read urging the need of more police at once. All business was cast aside and a bill was railroaded throufh authorizing the director of public safety to at once put on the police payroll 100 more patrolmen.

Claim They Were "Shanghaled."

Norfolk, Va., Nov. 13.—Nine men, alleging that they had been held in slavery on board the Chesapeake bay oyster dredge James A. Whiting, off Tangier Island since they were "shanghaied" from Richmond and placed aboard the Whiting October 3, were rescued Sunday by Deputy United States Marshals West and Miller and landed in Norfolk. The deputy marshals with the nine men, John Pruett, arrested upon a charge of having been implicated in the "shanghaieing" of the men, and several others, were making for Onancock in a small launch, when a storm arose and the launch almost capsized. One man became almost crazed from fright and tried to shoot himself.

Will Threaten Morocco.

Gibraltar, Nov. 13.—The British Atlantic fleet is to leave here for Tangier. In conjunction with a French fleet of warships it will engage in a demonstration in Moorish waters. The British warships were provisioned on very short notice. During the last few months conditions in the interior of Morocco have constantly grown worse. Foreigners have been assaulted and outraged, towns have been raided. Jews have been persecuted, foreign vessels on the coast have been fired upon, and while the diplomatic representatives of the powers concerned have protested to the sultan, their demands have been received with slight attention.

Italian Cruiser at Philadelphia.

Philadelphia, Nov. 13.—Rear Admiral Robert Cali, commanding the Oceanic squadron of the Italian navy, arrived here on board the cruiser Ettori Fieramosca. The admiral was received in port by the Italian consul and a committee of representative Italian citizens, with Harbor Master Pollock, whose boat escorted the Italian cruiser from Marcus Hook to her special anchorage in the river.

Lived 100 Years.

Wilkes-Barre, Pa., Nov. 13.—Margaret Sanders, of Danville, aged 100 years and 12 days, died at her home of pneumonia. She remarked before death that she was perfectly willing to lay her body aside whenever it seemed to be the will of the Creator that she should go. She had been ill only four days.

DOUGHERTY DEATH ACCIDENTAL

Long Needle Pierced His Heart When He Embraced Sweetheart.

Scranton, Pa., Nov. 13.—After a day spent in investigating the death of Thomas Dougherty, of Dunmore, who was killed by being pierced in the heart by a hat pin or long needle, the local police and County Detective Phillips decided to withdraw the warrant that had been issued for the arrest of Katie Burke, the girl who was suspected of having feloniously caused his death.

The authorities are of the opinion that they can never break down her story that the wound was accidentally inflicted. She says that she had been mending her brother's clothes with a long needle, used commonly hereabouts in mending miners' heavy outer clothing, and that on going down town in the evening she stuck the pin the bosom of her dress. Dougherty, who had been her sweetheart, hailed her and asked her to take a walk with him. She consented and they repaired to a field, where they sat on a log to talk. After a time he attempted to embrace her and the point of the needle that was in her dress caught in his vest, while the "eye" or blunt end, rested against her corset. In the embrace the needle was forced into his body, through the fifth rib and into the cavity between the pericardium and the heart. Half an inch of the needle was fixed in the rib in such a manner that every time the heart beat the apex of the heart was prodded by the point of the needle. Hemorrhages resulted that caused death.

Coroner Stein, who performed the autopsy, declares that Dougherty must have suffered more agony during the 15 that he lived than any victim of the most cruel inquisition that history or fiction records. With 70 pulsations to the minute, it is figured, that the heart was prodded no less than 60,000 times. He was conscious 13 of the 15 hours.

ADVOCATE BRYAN'S CANDIDACY

Travelers' Anti-Trust League Will Work For His Nomination.

New York, Nov. 13.—At a meeting of the Commercial Travelers' Anti-Trust League William Hoge, president of the league, in an address, advocated William Jennings Bryan for the next Democratic presidential candidate, and urged the members of the organization to assist in establishing clubs to work in behalf of Mr. Bryan. Harry W. Walker, chairman of the executive committee spoke along the same lines as Mr. Hoge.

It was voted that a committee be appointed to consist of 5000 Democratic commercial travelers, to be known as the "Traveling Committee." It was pointed out that the members on their journeys over the United States will distribute literature and organize Bryan clubs. It was also voted to establish a "record bureau," in which articles attacking the trusts will be kept, to be reprinted in pamphlet form for distribution.

BURSTING BOILER KILLS SIX

Were Scalded to Death By Immense Volumes of Steam.

Cleveland, Nov. 13.—Six men were killed and five seriously injured when a boiler in the power house of the Lake Shore railroad, in Collinwood, a suburb of Cleveland, blew up. The men were working close to the boiler, building the foundation for a dynamo, when the explosion occurred. They were all in the mouth of a subway facing the end which blew out of the boiler, and were scalded to death by the immense volumes of steam which shot out.

Engineers at the power house say the explosion was due to the formation of a "mud ring" in the filtering apparatus which clarifies the water before its passage into the boiler. The shock of the explosion was heard for two miles and created intense excitement in the town.

The Reposeful Woman.

"She is the cleverest woman of my acquaintance," was the verdict of one neighbor on another, "because she is not in the least dull and yet manages to be restful. I know so many bright women—bright in all sorts of different ways, but all alike in one thing—they are never reposeful. They are strung up to concert pitch. They amuse you, charm you, stimulate you, dazzle you, but they never rest you by any chance."—Brooklyn Times.

An Affidavit.

The suggestion of an English barrister that a certain matter was a proper subject for oral examination, not for affidavit, agreed with the emphatic opinion of an English justice recently retired. He was once trying a case at the Manchester assizes in which a man had been cross examined upon an affidavit. Summing up the evidence to the jury, the judge said, "Gentlemen, of all the weapons in the whole armory of iniquity there is nothing to equal an affidavit for concealing the truth."

Didn't Need To.

"It's too bad," said the judge caustically, "that the defendant should have chosen you for counsel. You know nothing about law."

"Well, your honor," replied the young lawyer, "I don't need to in this court."—Philadelphia Press.

Schooner and Crew Probably Lost.

Mobile, Ala., Nov. —It is believed here that the schooner Asa T. Stowell, lumber laden, from Pensacola for Havana, was lost with all on board in the September hurricane. The owners of the boat in Providence, R. I., have given up hope. She carried a crew of a captain and six men.

Decapitation.

Half a dozen physicians were talking of death. It isn't a subject usually chosen by physicians for discussion, but these were discussing it. However, it was not altogether physical death. They were including the hereafter.

"Well, said one, "I don't know whether there is to be a hereafter or not, and it doesn't trouble me very much, because I'll take chances on it if I can make the life I live before it the kind of life a man ought to live. But there is one thing about it that makes me hope there will be another life, and that is some of the opportunity I shall have of asking some of the people who have had their heads cut off if there was any sensation for a few minutes succeeding decapitation. I believe now that there is, and that life remains long enough for the decapitated person to realize that he has lost his head, or, rather, that he has lost his body, because the head is the centre of thought, and, of course, it is the body that is lost, not the head. At least that is the way a man with his head off would be bound to think of it. I fancy there is no pain, because that would require some time, and if life exists at all after decapitation it would not be long enough to realize the sensation of pain. It must be a very queer sort of feeling, and, as I may say, I hope there is a life hereafter so I may say I hope there is a life hereafter so I may have a chance to find out a few facts not otherwise obtainable."

To Divorce Husband who Smokes in Bed

Because her husband smoked too much at night, Mrs. Ella T. Chisholm, of McKeesport, has applied for a divorce, and the same is now being heard in the Pittsburg courts.

Mrs Chisholm is the wife of Donald Chisholm, a wealthy man, and he is now making a spirited defense to the suit.

He makes the claim that he gave to his wife more money in a week than any other man in the city of McKeesport gave to his wife, and challenges contradiction.

The charge of pretty Mrs. Chisholm that her husband smoked in bed until far into the night, so that she usually had to get up and sleep in a chair, caused some amusement in the court, and when laughed at Mrs. Chisholm broke down and cried.

Next Sunday's New York World.

A hundred years is a good way to look ahead, but there are people who think they can guess somewhere near what New York will be like in 2006 A. D. Among these is the great wizard of electricity, Thomas A. Edison, who tells, in next Sunday's World, what he thinks the future will bring forth. This is a marvellously interesting feature of a great Sunday Magazine.

Two Young Men Mob the Antes Fort Hotel.

A young riot occurred at the Gap hotel, conducted by Joseph Fredericks, near Antes Gap, early Sunday morning and when the melee was over the barroom was minus window glass.

The Jersey Shore Red men held an oyster supper at the Gap hotel, Saturday night, and had just left the place when Will and Kip Andrews and several companions appeared. They ordered some oysters and while they were being prepared they started fighting among themselves. Landlord Fredericks endeavored to stop the quarrel and they turned on him. However he managed to get them out of the hotel. Then they started to curse him from the outside and to break out the window glass with large stones.

Rocks were hurled through the windows; doors were hammered in, and no one dared to interfere through fear of being hit by one of the flying missilies. For six hours the two men held full sway about the hotel. The bombardment began at 11.30 o'clock and at 5 o'clock in the morning the men were still on the premises.

Finally two officers appeared on the scene and the desperados dispered. The Andrews boys were later arrested.

Stork Drops 7 Babies in "no Children Flat.

When Henry Williamson erected the Winona Apartments, in the East End of Pittsburg, he decreed that children, dogs and cats should be barred.

There are eight suites in the building, and he did not have any trouble in renting them to eight nice young married pairs, not one of whom had children, dogs or cats. That was about six months ago.

Three months ago the stork got busy and decided to show Mr. Williamson that it was running things to suit itself. Since then the mischievous old bird has dropped pretty little babies into seven of the flats, and people in the eighth expect a visit, too, in the very near future.

Neighbors now refer to the flats as the "Stork Apartments," and Williamson is trying to figure out how he can cancel the leases.

CORRESPONDENCE.

Moshannon.

James Fleming, arrived home this week from Somerset, Co., where he has been located for several years, to vote and also join the hunters in their annual trip to the hunting camp.

Robt. Lucas, spent a few days at his home, "between the creeks" recently.

Another wedding is expected in th near future. Boys get your instruments ready for the honor which is due such "nervy" folks.

John Hazzard has returned to Tyrone where he is at present employed, after a few days visit to his home at this place.

Sadie Wiggins, of Gorton, was a pleasant visitor in town this week at the "McGowan House."

Clemintine Cramer, having spent several weeks in Pine Glen, has returned home and will attend the High School here during the winter.

Ray Harshbarger, was home on a short visit to his home here and has returned to Indiana County, where he is employed.

Simeon Hazzard and Miles Crownover, are the champion rabbit hunters so far. The number caught has not been learned but will run high if you listen to their stories.

The Hoy potato crop, planted and raised by T. A. Fye, is now out of the ground. It is estimated they will have 2000 bushels or more. The experiment was a profitable one and will be repeated next year.

Thos. Kerin, seems to be very much interested on the Cooper Side of late. The important business which attracts his attention we are not able to state.

This week several parties of hunters started from here to locate themselves and be prepared for the coming deer season. It is reported that there are many deer in the vicinity and good luck is predicted by the sportsman.

A Junior League, has recently been organized in the M. E. Church with Edith Lucas, as superintendent. This promises to be an interesting feature of the church and no doubt the "little folks" will be greatly helped.

Several inches of snow fell here during the week—enough to cover the ground and make sleighing impossible. This is the second snow of the season and a sorerunner of lots more which is a characteristic of this locality.

Quite a number of teachers and their friends from this community, attended Institute at Bellefonte this week, viz. Frank Snyder, John Lucas, Edward Gleason, Laura Williams, Jennie Lucas, Rhoda Weaver, Edith Lucas and Harry Hoover.

Mrs. A. L. Gree, recently returned from an extended trip to parts of Oregon and the Pacific coast. She reports a pleasant journey and a very delightful country in which to live. She says she surely will repeat the visit some time and take in more of the country.

Mrs. Jacob Weaver, of Confluence, visited lately, at the home of T. D. Weaver.

Forget It.

A famous physican, upon being asked recently what is the cause of ill health replied; "Thinking and talking about it all the time. The ceaseless introspection in which so many of the rising generations of nervous folks indulge is certainly wearing them out. When they are not worrying as too whether they sleep too much or too little they are fidgeting over the amount of food they take of the quantity of exercise neccessary for health. In short, they never give themselves a moment's peace."

A HELPLESS CHILD

A weak and puny child is badly handicapped in the battle of life. It Is isolated from the healthy enjoyments of its little fellow beings It cannot partake either of their play or their sturdy work and progress in the world; its whole life is embittered by incapacity and weakness.

Any woman who expects to become a mother ought to know what Dr. Pierce,s Favorite Prescription will do both for her own health and safety during her time of trail and also to insure her in bequeathing a fair measure of health and length to the prospective little one

The Flying Lizard of Java.

The curious little animals known as flying lizards (Draco volans) are only found in Java, and their strange appearance is supposed to have been the origin of the dragon of the mediaeval eastern imagination. The reptile is like an ordinary lizard, but is provided with folds of extensible skin which are spread out by the long ribs and enable the animal to glide through the air from tree to tree in pursuit of the insects on which it preys. When lying prone on the mottled surface of a bough, it is an excellent example of "protective resemblance," as it is most difficult to be seen unless it moves.

Homer's Seven Cities.

It has been said that "seven cities claimed Homer dead, who while living had no place to lay his head," or words to that effect—that is to say, Homer's fame became such after his death that seven cities contended for the honor of having been the place of his birth. Do you know the name of those seven cities? They are Chios, Athens, Rhodes Colophon, Argos, Smyrna and Salamis.

RUSSIAN TERRORISM.

Extraordinary Precautions Taken to Guard General Trepoff.

I was chatting the other evening with a Parisian who had just returned from Russia and who told me that in western Europe we had as yet no real idea of the state of affairs there, says a Paris correspondent of the London Express.

"General Trepoff, for instance, who has the position once occupied by Plehve, former minister of the interior, knows that any moment he may be blown to pieces, as Plehve himself was, although he spent £20,000 ($100,000) a year to assure his personal safety. Do you know," my friend added, "how Trepoff goes out? A landau leaves the palace surrounded by a squad of Cossacks. A man is in it, but the man is not Trepoff. He drives in an ambulance wagon with the Red Cross of Geneva floating from the driver's seat, and as he passes people cross themselves and murmur, 'Another one of Trepoff's victims.'

"I went to interview Trepoff a few days before I left St. Petersburg," he added. "I had received a letter promising me an audience. At the palace I was passed on to a secretary, who took me through three empty salons to a small private office, where he left me. A few minutes later he returned and pointed to a telephone upon the table. 'His excellency is waiting for you,' he said quietly. 'Waiting?' 'Yes, at the other end of the wire. He sees nobody.' 'But I am a personal friend of his excellency's,' I explained. 'And that is why you are allowed into the palace,' was the answer.

"And so I said goodby by telephone to Trepoff. I could not bring the words 'Au revoir' across my lips somehow, for who knows where Trepoff will be when I am next in Russia?"

A SATISFYING STORY.

It Worked Both Ways In Behalf of the Congressman.

Some years ago there came to Washington a representative in congress from Iowa who was an ardent champion of the cause of prohibition.

One day a friend from home dropped in to see the congressman. During the course of his stay he had occasion to use his pocketknife, which the representative much admired. This knife had in it a hook, "designed," so the friend said, "to remove stones that might become fastened in a horse's hoof on a rocky road." Finally, seeing the intense admiration of the congressman for the knife, the friend gave it to him. When the statesman had reached home and had shown the gift to his wife she laughed.

"John," said she, "any man who has served three terms in the state senate, been lieutenant governor and had two terms in congress must be a pretty good man if he doesn't know a champagne opener from a hoof cleaner."

Somehow the story got out and was copied by nearly every newspaper in Iowa. One day the congressman met the newspaper man whom he understood to be the author of the first squib in the matter.

"You did me a great service," smilingly said the representative to the correspondent. "All the prohibitionists are taking my wife's view of my ignorance, and all the 'antis' are insisting that I'm a devil of a good fellow for imposing so successfully on my wife. It works in my behalf whichever way you take it." — Saturday Evening Post.

Really a Human Being.

The story is told in China, that years ago a missionary made his appearance upon a platform there and that the native orator who introduced him closed with these words: "When I have finished a gentleman from the west is going to address you. He is not a foreign demon. His appearance and his clothing may seem strange to you, but look carefully at him. He has two arms and two legs, two ears and two eyes, a nose (though a long one) and a mouth; and I assure you his teeth are made of bone, just like yours. He is really a human being, and I hope you will regard him as such."

State Will Increase Catfish by Breeding

State Fish Commissioner Meehan is making preparations for the propagation of catfish on an extensive scale. A year ago he had constructed a large pond for this species of fish at the Torresdale hatchery. As an experiment, several thousand were hatched there last spring, proving its entire success. He ordered ponds prepared at once at other hatcheries. A few weeks ago he received notice that there were ponds available at Wayne, Corry, Union City and Spruce Creek.

A number of mature catfish of the white and yellow species, numbering about 1,000, have been sent to these hatcheries, excepting Union City, and the superintendent of the Torresdale station is busily engaged in securing more from the Delaware river for the same stations.

It will require 8,000 mature fish to stock the breeding ponds at Torresdale Wayne, Corry and Spruce Creek. The white and yellow catfish will not be sent to the Union City hatchery, as the species to be propagated there will be the one indigenous to Lake Erie

Ponds for catfish will also be built at the Crawford hatchery in the spring. If the commissioner can secure the number of fish desired, the output for 1908 ought to be very large. The commissioner has always felt that greater attention should be paid to the propagation of what are known as the common food fishes, and he has been carrying out his idea as rapidly as the facilities at the hatcheries and the money at his command will permit.

In accordance with this idea, two years ago he began the propagation of yellow perch on a large scale, and last year he had pickerel. The output of the two fishes this spring approximated 200,000,000.

Young Man Showed Nerve.

Frank Hannah, a Warriorsmark young man, displayed abundant nerve Thursday night when he followed a pack of horse-thieves to and beyond Tyrone, into the mountain, and recovered a horse which had been stolen from the stable of his father, Robert F. Hannah, who resides on a farm near Warriorsmark.

When the horse was missed from the stable early Thursday evening, the neighbors were aroused and all started in the search, each man taking a different route. Frank came to Tyrone and proceeded out the old Glen Hope pike over the mountain. When he arrived in the vicinity of the three springs he came to a camp fire, three men asleep around it, and six or seven horses tethered nearby. He at once picked out his own horse, at the same time untying three or four of the others when one of the men awakened and made for Frank with a knife, but a quick movement saved Frank, the knife cutting a long gash in his coat and vest. In jumping away Frank dropped his revolver, but quickly mounted and made away with his own and the stolen horse. The robbers must have captured the untied horses, for they were soon mounted and in pursuit, but Frank outdistanced them and arrived in Tyrone at an early hour Friday morning. Officers here immediately telephoned to all the surrounding towns in Blair, Cambria, Clearfield and Centre counties to keep a lookout for the robbers and horses.

Timber Preservation.

Telephone poles nearly always decay at or just below the ground line. The upper portion of the pole, permanently in the air, rapidly drying after rain, is practically always dry and is rarely found decayed. The butt of the pole, deeply buried in the ground, is in a permanently damp condition, but oxygen being excluded it is seldom badly agected. Close to the ground line the soil retains the moisture and keeps the wood constantly damp where it is exposed to the air and to the heat of the sun, which is just what its little vegetable enemies like, but if the albumen in the wood can be rendered unfit for food the wood tissues offer practically no support to fungi. Timber preservation amounts, then, to poisoning the food supply of the destructive agencies. Preservation of timber is attempted in three ways—by seasoning, either natural or artificial; by outward mechanical means, sach as charring in fire or the applications of antiseptics on the surface of the stick, and by impregnating the wood with antiseptics. Of these the last is by far the most important. The most perfect method—which is also the most expensive—is the injection of dead oil of coal tar into the whole fiber of the pole.

A VICTIM OF LA GRIPPE.

Mrs. Henrietta A. S. Marsh, 769 W. 16th St., Los Angeles, Cal., President Woman's Benevolent Ass'n, writes:

"I suffered with la grippe for seven weeks, and nothing I could do or take helped me until I tried Peruna.

"I felt at once that I had at last secured the right medicine and I kept steadily improving. Within three weeks I was fully restored, and I am glad that I gave that truly great remedy a trial. I will never be without it again."

In a letter dated August 31, 1904, Mrs. Marsh says: "I have never yet heard the efficacy of Peruna questioned. We still use it. I traveled through Kentucky and Tennessee three years ago, where I found Peruna doing its good work. Much of it is being used here also."—Henrietta A. S. Marsh.

St. Martin Sunday Decided the Weather.

By St. Martin, but next winter will be either severe or mild. Sunday was his day and superstition hath it that it will set the pace for what is to follow—that if November 11 be cold and clear the winter will be a brisk one; that if it be stormy the winter will be placid, so the safest assertion is that by St. Martin't twill be either severe or mild.

He's a good old chap to swear by—especially as the oath is double-jointed—for not only is he on record as having shared his cloak with a beggar on a raw day, but in the catalogue of saints he is set down as the patron of eating and drinking and all who indulge therein. Therefore, you are likely to have some respect for him, even though you put him in the same class as the groundhog, when it comes to the weather. By the way, the groundhog, not being found on any menu, St. Martin, cannot be held responsible for his eccentricities.

Sunday was stormy. As to whether the winter will be severe, time alone will tell. Meanwhile, drink to the memory of St. Martin, who as a native of Hungary, dwelt in the fourth century, was Bishop of Tours, noted chiefly for his conversions and for the afore said cloak, which he cut in twain French kings used to carry it as a mascot into battle.

How he became mixed up in the weather not even the oldest inhabitants who keep daily record of that variable commodity seem to know. If you object to the thougnt of a severe winter, it's comforting to know that St. Martin's day is just as likely to predict wrong as right—in fact, a little more so.

A Few Household Items.

Mixing ginger cookies with cold coffee instead of water, as it improves them.

Turnips and beets are improved by adding one or two tablespoonfuls of sugar when cooking.

Cranberries can be made very palatable with much less sugar by mixing them with about half their bulk of apples through a colander.

A round piece of tin about three inches in diameter, half of it turned upright, makes a good pot scraper.

Good loops for hanging garments can be made by cutting strips from an old kid glove, rolling in each strip a piece of coarse string, then sewing the edges of the kid neatly together.

Whalebone that has become bent can be made straight by soaking it in tepid water for about twenty minutes or longer.

To insure straight edges on linens and damasks, draw a thread before cutting. Table clothes cut this way will fold even and straight after being washed. Then when cutting the table cloth, before hemming it, save the pieces, as these ravelings are the best threads with which to darn napery.

—Stops itching instantly. Cures piles, eczema, salt rheumatism, tetter, itch, hives, herbes, scabies—Doan's Ointment. At any drug store.

A [illegible] SEAT.

Use a Settle From Which the Back Has Been Removed.

The accompanying illustration shows a modern room environment in which has been added a window seat which is a separate piece of furniture. This special construction of simple character is merely a settee without a back, made to fit the window trims and placed closely against the wall. The upholstery is a movable cushion, and the ends of the settee have been decorated in a simple conventionalized flower design.

A MODERN WINDOW SEAT.

The comforts of the window seat are being appreciated, particularly in colonial period homes, into which it enters without incongruity or inappropriateness. Its charm grows with familiarity. It makes for comfort always.—Interior Decoration.

Praising the Lazy Man.

It must be admitted that some of the best work that has lived has been done by indolent men. This is especially true as regards literature. The finest description of a sunrise was written by the poet Thomson in bed. Coleridge was one of the most indolent of men, yet his work is, of its kind, unapproached. One of the most important improvements in the steam engine was due to the indolence of James Watt. Many other examples might be quoted; but, as a general rule, it is fairly correct to say that work which is the outcome of meditation or prolonged observation is best performed by people whose natural indolence makes them careless of the strife and bustle in which an active temperament would tend to immerse them.—Pearson's.

The Shaving Brush.

It is likely that the best shaving brush ever made sheds more or less hairs. To prevent this take an elastic band, neither too heavy nor too light; cut it once (not in two), and, holding one end firmly on the handle, wind the rubber around the bristles as close up to the handle as you can, stretching taut as you wind. When you come to the end tie a simple flat knot (not a granny knot) or else lose the end. By careful winding a very neat job can be done, and the bristles can be worn down to the socket without losing a hair.

A Work of Art.

Miss Knox—There goes Bess Mugley. Miss Bright—Yes, she played the part of the heroine in the private theatricals at the church. Miss Knox—Gracious! Did she have the face to play the heroine? Miss Bright—No, but the costumer fixed one up for her.—Philadelphia Press.

Hall For a Company's Workmen.

Plans have been drawn by Architect Harry Hake which provide for a building to be used for the purpose of theatrical entertainments, dances and lectures for employees of a manufacturing company in Lockland, O., says the Cincinnati Commercial Tribune. The building adjoins the Lockland plant and will have a frontage of 250 feet and a depth of 200 feet. It will be two stories high and a modern fireproof structure. The first floor will be occupied by the clerical force of the company, while an auditorium will be on the second floor. When not used for entertainments and lectures along educational lines, the auditorium will be the dining room of the workers. The new building will cost about $100,000.

Killed On Steps of Car.

Philadelphia, Jan. 30.—Ralph Heetner, aged 29 years, whose home is in Englewood, a suburb of Chicago, was killed on the steps of a parlor car attached to a New York express train here, while his wife sat in the car. Mr. and Mrs. Heetner had been in this city about three weeks and started for New York. The train made a brief stop at the West Philadelphia station, and Heetner stepped to the station platform to greet a friend. As the train started he attempted to board the vestibule car, but the doors were closed. As he stood on the lower step, grasping the hand rail, his head came in contact with an abutting bridge support and his skull was crushed.

One Way to Get a Persian Carpet.

A woman who accompanied her husband up the Khyber pass in Afghanistan tells how she saw a fine Persian carpet and coveted it. An assistant to their host went out and returning said: "My head man says the owner of the carpet is a wicked old man, who will not sell his carpet at any price, but he has gone for the night to sleep in a little village close by, which is beyond British boundary. He wants to know if he shall make a hole in the wall of the mud hut and steal it while the old sinner sleeps. Shall he walk in at once and kill him and take it? He will do whichever memsahib likes." Memsahib, however, discovered that she could live without the carpet after all.

SUNDAY EGGS FOR MISSIONS

Plan Tried In Danville, Ky., Helps Four Missionaries to Work.

Poetasters and paragraphers have poked fun at the Kentucky woman who last autumn announced that all eggs laid on Sunday would be devoted to foreign missions, says a Danville (Ky.) dispatch to the New York World. The wisdom of the policy has been vindicated and the religious fervor of the hen established by the announcement recently made after services at Bethel church, Mercer county, that enough Sunday eggs had been sold to warrant the sending of four missionaries to Japan next spring and that before the end of the year the society would be able to give three or four "egg paid" missionaries to benighted China.

The announcement was made by Mrs. Nannie C. Helm, wife of the pastor of Bethel Cumberland Presbyterian church, and was well received not only because it Christianizes in a way the hen, but because it opens up a new field for the charitably inclined.

It was in December last that the Woman's Missionary society after a heated debate agreed that all eggs laid on Sunday should be converted into one common fund to be devoted in some way then determined to foreign missions. Other denominations have taken up the idea, and before another year has passed it seems not improbable that Mercer county hens and roosters will be supporting a legion of missionaries in Japan and China.

THE AMBER HARVEST.

Work of the Waders and the Divers of the Baltic Sea.

The poor people who earn a precarious livelihood by gathering amber on the shores of the Baltic sea work only in the roughest weather. When the wind blows in from the sea, as it often does with terrific violence, the bowlders are tossed and tumbled at the bottom and great quantities of sea wrack are washed up on the beach. This is the harvest of the waders, for hidden in the roots and branches of the seaweed lumps of the precious gum may be found.

In other parts of the coast divers go crawling on the bottom of the sea for the lumps of amber hidden in seaweed and under rocks. It is believed that once a great pine forest flourished here where the great billows roll and that amber is the gum exuded from the Wedding Gift For Miss Roosevelt.

One of the most recent and interesting pieces of information relative to Miss Alice Roosevelt's marriage to Mr. Nicholas Longworth is that all of the members of the party who accompanied them to the Philippines will unite in presenting the young couple with a splendid wedding gift in the shape of a souvenir of the journey, says the New York Tribune's Washington correspondent. This will in nowise interfere, of course, with the individual gift from any member of the party, but will be an imperishable memento to remind them of the friends who added to the pleasure of the trip.

Alabaster Ornaments.

The best method of cleaning any alabaster ornament is to first remove any grease with spirits of turpentine and then to place the article in water for ten minutes or a little longer if very dirty. Next rub all over with a painter's brush and leave to dry. Then rub again with a soft brush dipped in plaster of paris.

Glove Maxims.

A woman who is careful of her hand must be careful of her gloves, for this is most important. If they are tight they ruin the shape of the hand; if they are badly cut they give a common aspect to the whole appearance, and such gloves are the dearest in the end.

Fix It Now.

There is that bit of gimp or fringe which has been hanging for some time from the chair or couch. Just a few moments with a tack hammer and a few gimp tacks and these pieces of furniture will lose that run down at the heel sort of look they have had.

Frosting For Cake.

One cup of frosting sugar, two tablespoonfuls of water; boil together; take it off the stove and stir in the white of an egg beaten to a stiff froth; stir all together well, then frost your cake with it, and you will never want a nicer frosting than this.

Artistic covers are used for the telephone book. They are made to suit the color tone of the room or hall in which they hang. Simple cretonne is one of the prettiest coverings.

A cheap but efficacious disinfectant is made by dissolving one pound of green copperas in one quart of water. Pour down the drains.

LIFE OF A SILK HAT

WITH CARE ONE MAY BE MADE TO LAST A HUNDRED YEARS.

And It Can Be Made Over and Over Again as Long as the Frame Holds Together—How Its Twenty-nine Pieces Are Molded Into One.

"Actors use up the old silk hats," said the hatter. "Actors?" asked the listener.

"Actors," said the hatter, pausing in the act of lifting a chunk of iron out of the stove and dropping it in the hollow flatiron he carried. "Actors—I mean variety actors, of course. They need them in their business. Haven't you ever wondered where all the old silk hats come from when you've seen the comedians kicking each other's tiles all over the stage? Well, such places as mine supply them.

"It takes a good many years to wear out a silk hat. With proper care they'll last to be a hundred years old. Of course before that time the silk will turn red on top, where it is exposed to the sun, but that redness can be overcome for a time. You can make over a silk hat so long as the frame holds together.

"There are twenty-nine pieces in a silk hat. They are the brim, which is in four pieces; the silk lining, in two; the foundation, in two; the gossamer tips between—there are two of these also; the two coverings for the side crown, the two for the tips, the three pieces of plush, the three rubbers, the underbrim, one piece; the two pieces of the band and binding, the leather, one piece; the bow braid, one piece; the label, one piece; the eyelets, two of them; the sticker, or piece of court plaster, joining the sweatband together in the back.

"Cotton cloth is the foundation of the silk hat. It is stiffened with shellac cut with ammonia and hot water. The cloth is cut up in strips, cut on the bias, and then stretched on the block in four thicknesses, one thickness being stretched and permitted to dry before another is put on. The lining is put in first, the cloth being stretched over that, and then, after it has been permitted to dry, it is ironed on the block, powdered gum demar being dusted on to prevent the iron from sticking to the cloth soaked in shellac.

"The block is in five pieces, the center, the two sides and the two ends, which are removed in this order when the cloth body has dried in shape. The leading makers get out their hats on the block they adopt for the style of the season, and block makers then imitate this block until any hatter may buy from a New York or Boston block maker the season's latest block at a reasonable price.

"The block is then removed from the shellac cloth shell, and a doffer is inserted to stretch the hat to the required size, the block being a trifle small. This doffer is simply a felt shape, which fits closely to the block, and thus puts a thickness of felt between the hat and the block. The hat is ironed as soon as the doffer is inserted, this melting the shellac and permitting the cloth shell to adapt itself to the changed conditions. After the ironing it is covered with a coat of shellac varnish, for which the hatter now has to pay $5 a quart. When it is dry again the silk plush is put on with a hot iron, steamed on, in fact.

"This plush comes in rolls like any other and is sold by the yard. It is cut in strips seven inches wide for the crown and two and one-half inches for the brim. The top piece having been cut out, it is sewed to the crown piece and is then put on the cloth shell. Once on the plush nap is turned back at the joint, cut off and stuck on and then brushed back, which makes a joining so neat that it is almost impossible to detect.

"The hat is put on a potance block and potanced, which means simply that it is hung on a round block of cloth covered wood which rests on an elbow iron at the hatter's bench and is finished over again, after having already been finished with a hot iron and plenty of elbow grease. The edge of the brim is curled, the hat is trimmed, bound, the leather sweatband is inserted, and then it is ironed again until it shines like glass. After that it is ready to wear.

"It may be made over whenever the change in the modes is great enough to make this seem desirable, and when it gets too dirty it may be washed by the hatter and thus thoroughly cleansed. When he makes it over he strips the plush from the frame and starts at the beginning again, just as for a new hat, with this exception, that he has the groundwork and has simply to shape it again. If any piece of the silk looks worn he will replace it so deftly that one may not be detected from the other, and thus the silk hat may be said never to wear out."—Providence Journal.

Macedonia.

Macedonia, the land of the three streams, Vardar, Struma and Vistritsa, is hemmed in by lofty mountains, of which the best known or the highest are Olympus, Shardagh and Rhodope, the last named rising to between 8,000 and 9,000 feet above the level of the sea. It is among the most picturesque countries of Europe, abounding in magnificent forests, which climb hills, fringe rivers and cover islands; in wild mountain scenes, wonderful waterfalls, silent, sailless lakes—an appropriate setting for gems of emerald islets, deep gorges, dizzy mountain paths, smiling plains and desolate passes, which ought to prove an irresistible attraction to the traveler who regards genuine danger and real discomfort as the appropriate condiment of pleasure.

CARDINALS' HATS.

They Are Never Worn and Are Not Intended to Be Worn.

The most famous hat in the world is never worn and is not intended to be worn. Yet it is not a freak hat or merely a hat turned out to show what a certain factory can do. It is the cardinal's hat, the symbol of a cardinal's dignity in the Catholic church, and so completely is it the mark of that dignity that "to receive the hat" is everywhere used as meaning that a person has been advanced to the cardinalate of the Roman church.

The cardinal's hat is of scarlet cloth lined with scarlet silk. It is round and very flat, with practically no depth and no place to fit on the crown of the head. On each side of what serves as a crown are red silk cords, holding fifteen red bell shaped tassels. These hang down on either side of where the cardinal's cheeks would be if he could wear his hat and are arranged in five rows, the first row having one ball, the second row two balls, the others three, four and five respectively.

To confer this hat calls for a stately ceremony. If the newly chosen cardinal lives out of Italy a papal ablegate is sent to him to confer the red berretta and the pall, but he does not receive the hat except from the pope himself. When the new cardinal reaches Rome, which he must do within a year after he receives the berretta, the pope appoints a day for actually conferring the hat. A public consistory is held, attended by the pope and by all the cardinals in Rome; mass is sung, the new cardinal lying flat on his face while prayers and lessons are read; then he is led by two attending cardinals back to the hall of the consistory, where with many prayers the pope himself rests the hat on his head, saying:

"Receive this red hat. It signifies that even to death and the shedding of blood thou shouldst show thyself intrepid for the exaltation of the holy faith, the peace and repose of Christian people, the increase and maintenance of the holy Roman church."

Then the cardinal kisses the pope's foot, and his holiness retires. The cardinal then exchanges the kiss of peace with all the other cardinals, who then, turn by turn, make visits of congratulation to him as he sits in his chair.

This red hat was given first in 1245 by Innocent IV. at the council of Lyon. Even when a cardinal gets his hat it is of no use to him so long as he is alive. Only after his death is it used. It may be permissible, but not importantly useful, to wonder where it is kept meantime, but at the cardinal's death it is brought out and laid on his eminence's bier, at his feet, and when the funeral and entombment are over the red hat is hung up over the place of interment in the cathedral church.—Hat Review.

Railway to the Red Sea.

To the Red sea, not in Pharaoh's chariots, but in steam cars, is what the people are to do early this year, says the Chicago Tribune. Most of the constructive material and locomotives have been sent from Glasgow. The line extends from Suakim, the present sea terminus, 332 miles into the interior, traversing first northward and then ascending the plateau 3,000 feet high, which runs parallel with the coast. Stretching fifty miles across the waterless waste of desert, it reaches the Atbara river twenty miles below its confluence with the Nile. Skirting the river, it ultimately joins the Khartum-Wady-Halfa railway north of the Atbara bridge. The new line will cost about $10,000,000 and will include extensive bridge works. Suakim may cease to be a great port, as the new terminus, now known as Port Sudan, forty-five miles north of Suakim, already has developed greatly and has a population of 2,000. The country traversed is capable of great development.

A Divided Sentiment.

Little Agnes is twelve years old. She is a poetess. She has, maybe, a sense of humor and, positively, she did not like her stepmother. On the latter's birthday the youthful rhymer put forth all her powers to please the lady who had usurped her own mother's place. The quatrain ran as follows:

I thank you for your kindness,
I thank you for your love
And hope God will reward you
By taking you above.

Her stepmother hardly knew whether this was to be taken prematurely or not. She supposed not.—New York Press.

Battles In the Sea.

Fights between sharks and porpoises are said to be common in the waters around the Florida keys, and the fishermen thereabout declare that the porpoise always wins and sends the shark, which usually begins the fight, scurrying away. The shark has to turn on its side to bite, and the nimble porpoise easily keeps out of reach of its snapping jaws and then jumps in and deals the shark tremendous slaps with its tail.

Obedient.

"Now, Tommy," said the mother of a small boy as she paused in the disciplinary slipper exercise, "what made you eat the whole of that pie?"

"'C-cause," sobbed Tommy, "you t-told me to n-never do t-things by h-halves."—Chicago News.

She Got the Blessing.

"That young groom," said the minister after the ceremony, "gave me a fifty dollar fee. What a blessing!"

"Yes," said his wife, with her hand out, "it is more blessed to give than to receive."—Exchange.

They Didn't Play.

A monster political parade was held in Philadelphia during one of the campaigns. It was headed by a band of thirty-five discoursing stirring marching tunes. The leader of the band had contracted in advance to supply that many players, but when he came to count noses he found eight missing. It did not take him long to decide what to do. After some hustling he secured eight men, not one of whom could play a note of music, and decked them out in the regulation band uniform. He placed instruments and music in their hands and paraded the full number. "Did they play?" was asked. "Yes," said the band leader, "but not music. I put a cork in each of the eight instruments."

Wouldn't Trust Him.

"Of course," said the sarcastic man, "you always do your wife's bidding."

"Gracious! No!" replied Mr. Henpeck. "She wouldn't let me. When she goes to an auction sale she never takes me with her."—Philadelphia Press.

Contradictory.

Dancing Proves Fatal

Many men find women catch colds at dances which terminate in pneumonia and consumption. After exposure, if Foley's Honey and Tar is taken it will break up a cold and no serious results need be feared. Refuse any but the genuine in a yellow package. We have secured the agency for Orino Laxative Fruit Syrup, the new laxative that makes the liver lively, purifies the breath, cures headache and regulates the digestive organs. Cures chronic constipation. Ask us about it. C. M. Parrish.

Good for everything a salve is used for and especially recommended for piles. That is what we say of DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve. On the market for years and a standby in thousands of families. Get DeWitt's. Sold by Green's Pharmacy.

This is Worth Remembering.

As no one is immune, every person should remember that Foley's Kidney Cure will cure any case of kidney or bladder trouble that is not beyond the reach of medicine. C. M. Parrish.

Need a good cathartic? A pill is best. Try a pill like DeWitt's Little Early Risers. About the most reliable on the market. Sold by Green's Pharmacy.

Charm Of Clear Complexion

Every one who wants a good, healthy color, a ruddy glow, and a complection free from pimples and muddy spots should try Laxakola tablets, mild, safe, sure, prepared from vegetable laxatives with a selective action upon the skin. 25 cents. C. M. parrish

THE WOMAN WHO COUGHED.

Catarrh had nearly ruined me. It had eaten away the partition in my nose; produced Asthma, Bronchitis, Rheumatism; ruined my stomach; in fact, gone all through my system. Then Grip finished me. I was a wreck; took cold at nothing; and coughed day and night. The doctors dosed me with opium and quinine. No good. Cough "cures"? Bah! Then Brazilian Balm renovated me. Killed every germ. Took 10 $1.00 bottles. Now I'm like a girl of 16.

PLENTY GAME IN THE MOUNTAINS.

Over one Hundred Bears Have Been Killed and Deer Will be Quite Abundant.

State Game Protector Joseph Berrier, of Harrisburg, reports a plentitude of every sort of game throughout the length and breadth of the entire state. Word received at headquarters is to the effect that for years different kind of game have not been so abundant, and the increase is looked upon as a result of careful means of preservation and a more systematic method of looking to the interests of the birds and animals that inhabit the states, forests and fields.

Announcements have it that more than 100 bears have been killed in the state since the opening day of the season. This is considered a wonderful record in the light of the age of the season. Northern sections seem to abound in big game, and every day brings fresh news to the centre of the commission at the capitol city. Although the beginning of the deer season is yet a week distant gunners are anticipating the opening of the sport for the fleet-footed animals.

This kind of game is increasing exceptionally fast under the protection of the law and through the shortness of the set hunting-time. Since "deer-licks" are being deemed an offense in the sight of the law, and since dogs are not allowed to run the deer, they are becoming more plentiful than for years.

Wild turkeys have come in for their share of popularity in the earliness of the turkey season, and the first day brought the word that in the Bald Eagle valley, near Julian, in Centre county, 49 were killed. This is a great record for the opening day on this particular kind of bird, and the scarcity of the big birds is long since forgotten. This neck-o'-the-woods comes in for a good number of these birds and their hunters, as well. Pheasants are found in almost every quarter and are so plentiful that they are not sought after as a luxury by sportsmen of certain sections. Coveys of quail are scattered throughout the state and condition results from the fact that the game commission stocked the state with 3,900 pairs of the birds; these little ones were bought in Alabama at a cost of $9 per dozen.

Rabbits, since the law stepped in and hindered the stray dogs from running them down during the months of breeding, have increased materially in their numbers, and now rabbit hunting can be relied upon as a means of good results. Squirrels are leaving this northern section of the state and are migrating to the warmer climate farther down the river. While in Wetham some days ago, Mr. Berrier says that he saw many of the little animals fording the river on their way south. When they begin to migrate streams or no other obstacles stop their course.

One of the most pleasing features of the whole hunting season has been the fewness of the offenses against the laws protecting game of every sort. Either a fear or a respect for law seems to have gained a hold on the sportsmen of the land, and the work in this direction has been very easy. Italians and Hungarians have come in for some censure and some penalties, but most of these have been the result of Sunday hunting, and the offenses in general have not been as momentous as those of former years. During a stoy in one of the upstate counties the game protector met a man coming out of the woods with five fine black squirrels, and he questioned him as to the possibility of a gunner in these woods; the man with the game replied that any man could shoot 50 in a day without trouble, but the law and the man's conscience kept all from overstepping the bounds of law.

WEAK HEARTS

are caused by Indigestion. If you eat a little too much, or if you are subject to attacks of indigestion, you have no doubt had shortness of breath, rapid heart beats, heartburn or palpitation of the heart.

Indigestion causes the stomach to expand—swell, and puff up against the heart. This crowds the heart and interferes with its action, and in the course of time the heart becomes diseased.

SIBERIAN HOSPITALITY.

A Charming Visit, With a Somewhat Terrifying Climax.

Detained at the Siberian village of Krivochokovo, M. Jules Legras remembered that he had a letter to a notable of the place and hastened to present it. M. Gautier in his book on Russia describes in M. Legras' own words the cordial hospitality with which he was received and also tells of the difficulty which concluded his charming visit.

"They had detained me till 10 o'clock in the evening," he writes, "by repeating, 'Why are you in a hurry?' and I was on the point of making my departure when I heard the mistress of the house say in a low voice to her husband, 'Shall I send for the carriage?' To which he replied, 'No.' At this word a shiver passed over me. Doubtless this host, who had made me send away the coachman, was unaware of what his refusal meant, else he would have said to me, 'Here is a sofa; sleep here.'

"My situation was perilous, but what could I do? At the end of a few moments I rose to take my leave, and, having asked if I could get a cab, was met with the reply that at this hour none could be obtained.

"Krivochokovo is a village whose population constitutes the very flotsam and jetsam of Siberian civilization. The village has neither streets nor lights nor police. It is considered a cutthroat spot, where honest people shut themselves tight at night.

"I had neither stick nor revolver, and I had on me a large sum of money. Finally, I was ignorant of the exact position of my inn, situated over a mile away. First of all, dogs threw themselves upon me. I shook them off and started as best I could.

"The night was inky black. Amid the irregular clusters of houses there was no regular street by which to guide myself. As I hesitated I heard a 'Who is that?' It was a watchman of a pile of wood who hailed me. He directed me, and, giving me a large branch that would do as a stick, he said: 'You are wrong, barine, to go about this way without a revolver. The place is not safe. May God protect you!'

"As I approached another cluster of houses a watchman sounded his rattle menacingly and dogs flew at me savagely. When this watchman approached I induced him to accompany me. He informed me that the evening before a traveler who was staying at my hotel, having started early to catch a train, had been assassinated about ten paces from there. Finally we reached the inn. It took a long time to make them open the door, but I finally got inside and reached my room, trembling with fever and fatigue, and fell down helplessly, only conscious of having passed an hour and a half whose remembrance will remain with me long. As for my so amiable host, whose hospitality might have cost me my life, he will doubtless never know of this adventure."

THE COFFEE PLANT.

A Native of Abyssinia That Was Transported to Arabia.

The origin of coffee is lost in the mists of antiquity, but the plant is believed to be a native of Abyssinia and to have been carried thence into Arabia early in the fifteenth century, whence the Meccan pilgrims soon carried it to all parts of the Mohammedan world. A bureau of commerce and labor publication notes that Burton in his "Anatomy of Melancholy" (1621) makes this reference to it: "Turks have a drink called coffee, so named from a berry black as soot and as bitter, which they sip up hot, because they find by experience that that kind of drink so used helpeth digestion and promoteth alacrity."

Although brought to Venice by a physician in 1591, it was only in 1652 that the first coffeehouse was established in London, and it only became fashionable in Paris in 1669, says the same authority. England gradually forsook coffee for tea, but the progress of the beverage, though slower, was steadier in France.

Until 1696, when the Dutch began to successfully grow coffee trees in Java from the Malibar (India) bean, all coffee came from Arabia. The coffee culture of the West Indies and Central and South America had its beginnings, it is said, in a slip taken from a tree in the botanic gardens at Paris, which had obtained a vigorous growth from a cutting said to have been stolen from the botanic gardens at Amsterdam. All the plantations of the old and new world are practically derived from the specimens taken from Arabia, first to India, thence to Java and elsewhere.

RAISING BLACK FOXES.

Maine Farmer's Scheme to Procure Valuable Pelts.

A Maine farmer who raises nothing but foxes claims to have discovered that the black fox is not a freak, and he is proceeding to prove this theory by mixing a black fox from Ohio with a red one caught in the Maine woods, says the Worcester Telegram. From the cross he has a pair of fine black foxes ten weeks old, and as these twins are not the first he has raised the same way he is confident that in time he may be able to replace all the red foxes on his farm and raise for the fur market nothing but the finest blacks, whose pelts sell for $200 to $300 each.

Judging from sales made in the past, the four black foxes he has now are entered on his stock list as worth $1,000, and he feels rich. He has the foxes inclosed by a wire fence sixteen feet high and running down to the ledge, so that the sly rascals cannot dig out. He feeds the animals and lets them have the full run of the farm, which looks like a weed garden with a few trees growing in it, but pays a profit with small outlay for labor.

TREACHEROUS RIVER BEDS.

A Homesteader's Outfit When Caught In the Quicksands.

The "mover's" wagon, canvas covered and travel worn, is always picturesque. The traveling home for a family and all their worldly goods, from furniture to poultry, is still a familiar sight on western roads. The spirit of dissatisfaction and longing for newer fields that lurks under that broad brimmed hat is a spark of the same fire that has been the theme of our history. By some stream under the cottonwoods of an evening you may sometimes see this half gypsy, and the fire, with its accompanying smell of bacon and beans or the song and accordion, will suggest as you drive by why the roving has always its fascinations.

There are, however, the long dusty days of travel and sore backed horses, the occasional swollen fords, and always present, though seldom encountered, are the quicksands of the dry bottom streams. They are indistinguishable and silent. The shallow ribbons of water flow over them as over all the rest of the river bed, but once fairly in their grasp there is a remorseless, certain settling, which a struggle only hastens and which ends in an everlasting disappearance. Cattle and horses are caught in it oftenest, and, if seen in time, can be pulled out with a rope and horse, but into its hungry maw have gone horses, wagons and men, and even a locomotive, going through a bridge, has been known to disappear in this bottomless mystery.—Allen True in Outing.

The Onion.

"Onions are really sweeteners of the breath after the local effects have passed away," says one learned doctor. This statement is not in accordance with our own experience; therefore we avoid onions. We are still further informed by the same authority that onions correct stomach disorders and carry off the accumulated poisons of the system. They provide a blood purifier that all may freely use. Eaten raw an onion will often check a cold in the head. One small onion eaten every night before retiring is this well known doctor's prescription for numerous affections of the head and is highly recommended for sleeplessness. Personally, we are never troubled with any of these complaints and therefore still look upon this strange vegetable as something to avoid.—Vegetarian.

When You Sneeze.

The alarm signal of a draft is a sneeze, which is a spasmodic effort of nature to start up the circulation and relieve the congestion. A person may be far gone toward contracting a cold before he sneezes, but the moment he gets this warning he should change his position, look around for the draft and move out of it or protect himself against it. A draft is something to be sneezed at—and to be avoided. Drafts cause more deaths than war, whisky, football, consumption and yellow fever put together. Almost everybody who dies from disease dates his sickness from taking cold. This is especially true of elderly people. Yet it is a matter in regard to which there are great ignorance and inattention.

Heart Burials.

The body of Louis IX., after his death at Carthage in 1270, is related to have been boiled in wine and water in order to preserve it for transportation, and it was then shipped by Charles of Anjou (I.) to Sicily. Here the flesh and viscera were deposited in the Benedictine Abbey of Monreale, near Palermo. The heart and the bones remained, by desire of the soldiers, in the camp. Later his son Philip (Le Hardi) having carried them and those of his brother, Tristan, into Italy, they were taken to Paris in 1271. On March 21 of that year the bones, reduced to ashes, were deposited temporarily in Notre Dame, whence they were presently borne in state to the Benedictine Abbey of St. Denis, and at each spot by the way where the bearers paused, seven in number, Philip subsequently caused a cross to be raised.

Charles of Anjou dying at Foggia, 1285, his heart was sent to Angers, while his body was entombed in San Gennaro, at Naples. His viscera remained in the Duomo at Foggia.

Philip III. (Le Hardi) died of pestilence at Perpignan Oct. 5, 1285. His flesh was buried at Narbonne. His bones were transferred to St. Denis. His heart was given by Philip IV. (Le Bel) to the Dominicans of Paris.—London Notes and Queries.

The Clock.

The clock has a strange way of telling different tales with the same face. If it is telling one man to hurry up, it tells the next man who looks that there is plenty of time.—Atchison Globe.

A COSTA RICAN VOLCANO.

Fen Picture of Poas and Its Dangerous Surroundings.

On the island of Costa Rico is the remarkable volcano of Poas. The crater has an altitude of about 8,500 feet. The traveler who makes the ascent on reaching the lip of the crater finds himself at the brink of a vast perpendicular sided pit, at the bottom of which lies a motionless pool of yellowish water The sense of deadly stillness and desolation is undisturbed by any indication of life. The almost vertical walls are devoid of even a vestige of plant creation; not a bird wings its way through the air, the surface of the pool is without a ripple, and even the human voice sounds strange and incongruous. Suddenly the silence is broken by a great and startling underground rumbling, and a huge column of a dark colored liquid is thrown to a vast height from a spot near the center of the lake. The column ordinarily EASILY SCARED.

An Adventure With a Rhinoceros In East Africa.

Of a curious encounter with a rhinoceros an African traveler writes in the Globe Trotter, published in Nairobi, British East Africa: "He was peacefully grazing on a choice patch of green stuff and apparently meant to do the well bred thing and allow us to pass by; so, with my heart in my mouth, nothing in my pockets and an empty magazine rifle in my hand, I attempted a slide for a more secure position. But I was immediately foiled of this object by a suspicious movement on the part of the enemy. A swish of the tail, a suggestive uplifting of the snout and a sniff of the atmosphere, and the delicate and fairylike creature bore down ponderously upon my two native bearers and myself.

"My knees promptly refused to work. I could not move a muscle, and so with all the British pluck and courage of which we have read so much I calmly resigned myself. By this time the hideous beauty had advanced to within ten yards of its prey, when, to my surprise, the two boys accompanying me hastily dismantled themselves of all baggage, and, with all muscles stretched, ready for a sprint, they stood their ground and, without moving an inch, began to whistle for all they were worth.

"Quickly noting the satisfactory result of the maneuver, I blew my whistle hastily and with good will. The shrill notes struck strangely on the untutored ear of the rhino, for he promptly turned tail and fled."

A Short Cut.

"There goes a man," observed a steamship agent as he directed attention to a surly looking individual who had just engaged passage for Europe, "whose efforts are devoted to constructing short cuts in business methods and in eliminating all time consuming men and their propositions from his busy existence. He is a man of very few words. Some years ago this gentleman crossed the ocean and had a very unpleasant trip. One morning a sympathetic passenger offered him a lemon, expressing a sincere wish that it would give relief. The pale traveler seized the lemon, hurled it viciously into the ocean and growled:

"'This is a quicker way than the other.'"—New York Times.

An Odd Moorish Custom.

As a people the Moors are already well inclined to anything that gilds life. A correspondent says: "Nothing delights them more as a means of agreeably spending an hour or two than squatting on their heels in the streets or on some door stoop, gazing at the passersby, exchanging compliments with their acquaintances. Native 'swells' consequently promenade with a piece of felt under their arms, on which to sit when they wish."

RUSSIAN TERRORISM.

Extraordinary Precautions Taken to Guard General Trepoff.

I was chatting the other evening with a Parisian who had just returned from Russia and who told me that in western Europe we had as yet no real idea of the state of affairs there, says a Paris correspondent of the London Express.

"General Trepoff, for instance, who has the position once occupied by Plehve, former minister of the interior, knows that any moment he may be blown to pieces, as Plehve himself was, although he spent £20,000 ($100,000) a year to assure his personal safety. Do you know," my friend added, "how Trepoff goes out? A landau leaves the palace surrounded by a squad of Cossacks. A man is in it, but the man is not Trepoff. He drives in an ambulance wagon with the Red Cross of Geneva floating from the driver's seat, and as he passes people cross themselves and murmur, 'Another one of Trepoff's victims.'

"I went to interview Trepoff a few days before I left St. Petersburg," he added. "I had received a letter promising me an audience. At the palace I was passed on to a secretary, who took me through three empty salons to a small private office, where he left me. A few minutes later he returned and pointed to a telephone upon the table. 'His excellency is waiting for you,' he said quietly. 'Waiting?' 'Yes, at the other end of the wire. He sees nobody.' 'But I am a personal friend of his excellency's,' I explained. 'And that is why you are allowed into the palace,' was the answer.

"And so I said goodby by telephone to Trepoff. I could not bring the words 'Au revoir' across my lips somehow, for who knows where Trepoff will be when I am next in Russia?"

WHOLE OR HALF TRUTHS.

Better be single in peace than married in war.

The rock of success isn't located in a field of roses.

The fellow who objects to discipline needs it the most.

You can inherit ability, but you've got to hustle for experience.

The optimist has an easy time of it. He smiles while others work.

It doesn't cost anything to say "good morning" even if it's raining.

Some folks ought to take their consciences out once in awhile for exercise.

The optimist who thinks that folks are civilized should yell "Fire!" to a crowded house and watch results.—From "Gumption," by N. C. Fowler, Jr.

Boy That Looks and Acts Like a Girl.

Visitors at the Harrisburg hospital, who come in contact with Andrew Turner, a colored orderly, invariably take the boy for a girl, says the Harrisburg Independent.

Not only in appearance is Andrew like a girl but his leaning towards the weaker sex is so great that the other attendants at the institution are often amused to see the boy going about his work with a rose neatly tucked in his hair and wearing waists which much resemble the ones worn by the women employes.

One day last week the young man's efforts to look like a woman went one step too far when he went about his duties with a woman's dress hanging gracefully from his waist.

This was two much for Miss Jones, superintendent of the hospital, and she severely reprimanded him.

Since then Andrew has not tried to don the dress unless it be in the secrecy of his own room but to carry out his whim he still wears the suspicious looking waists and to carry out his womanish appearance he now wears an apron.

Should Andrew happen to answer the door with his apron on the visitor to al appearances is being admitted by a pretty colored girl. Such a person receives a distinct shock when his conductor in turning about to direct him to the superintendent reveals a pair of men's pantaloons.

Turner is 20 years old and his facial characteristics are remarkably like those of a girl. There is no sign of a beard. The hospital authorities say that he is a good worker and one of the best behaved of their employes.

Hank and Helen Joined.

Miss Helen Potts, daughter of our eminent grocer, was married last Tuesday night to Hank Martin. It was a brilliant wedding and fraught with interest for a world of friends of both, let alone a lot of rubbernecks who went to the church and bugged their eyes. The wedding took place at 8.30 o'clock, but the preparations for it have been going on for two years. It was a billing and cooing romance, very soft, some people say, but what has that to do with it? Little Lutey Baker acted as ribbon girl, or something, stretching out a long ribbon bought from the Racket store, to keep the guests in their stalls. In came Helen at the proper time, and lo, and behold, there came Hank, too. The preacher, none other than the Rev. Beggs, simply ate the marriage ceremony up, showing himself to be an adept at passing out the knot-tying. But we would like to suggest something. When Hank gets married again (let us hope it may never be) he ought to cut out that "Yep" business and say "Yes." Another think; Hank had a chew of tobacco in one cheek, we believe, and that don't seem to be elite in such a social function. Constable Brown was there to keep order and there was no fights, for the officer's eagle eye was upon the multitude like a tiger all through the performance. Had there been trouble, no doubt Constable Brown would have fought like the devil to stop it. Well, all hail to the bride and bridegroom, and may they live to a ripe old age and never have much trouble, like some other married couples of this town do, no names being mentioned. It was a fine wedding and let us hope that a few other mushy, spooning couples do likewise and stop it soon.

Of Interest to Horsemen.

Under the heading of "Turf and Track" the following news items appeared in the Philadelphia North American:

A new trotting and fair circuit will be organized in the State, with stake and class races, including the following towns: Clearfield, Altoona, Bellefonte, Johnstown, Indiana and Lock Haven.

W. F. Patchen, of Burnside, Pa., has traded the pacing mare Ash 2.19¼, with Dr. Robinson, of State College, Pa., for Graymont, 2.19¼, and a consideration.

Danger in Their Path.

The young girl cannot be too careful of her conduct in public. The girl who uses the street for a rendezvous with her male acquaintances will lose the respect of the public. The parents of a young girl who misbehave on the street must have little regard for public opinion and no love for children or they would not permit them to loiter upon the streets at night, meeting temptations which in their ignorance of the world they are too often unable to resist. Street walking is the first step on the road to ruin and shame.

Short Items of Local Interest Gathered By The Way Side

—The pretty school marm's own the town.

—The Centre County Teacher's Institute is in full swing this week.

—William Rinesmith has succeeded W. V. Larimer as manager of the Palace Livery at this place.

—Samuel E. Goss and family will not leave for their future home in Wisconsin until about the first of December.

—Postmaster W. W. Montgomery is going to have a flagstone pavement put down in front of his home on Allegheny street.

—C. C. Shuey has purchased the property of Daniel O'Leary, on south Allegheny street, the latter having moved to Pittsburg.

—A groceryman who has been in the business for fifteen years, says that the order most frequently heard in his store is, "Gimme a dollar's worth of sugar?"

—An old landmark at Spruce Creek, the Isett house, which was located close to the main line of the Pennsylvania railroad at that place, is being torn down to make way for an additional track which the Pennsy proposes to lay through the town. For half a century James Cullen, the former supervisor at Spruce Creek, had his office in the building.

—William H. Johnson, who conducted the blacksmith shop on Ridge street near the Undine Hose house has sold the establishment to Messrs. Smith and Doll who will conduct the business in the future. Both are competent workmen, fully understanding their work, and will be careful and speedy in the work which may be assigned to them.

—"Pennsylvania Day" at the Pennsylvania State College will this year be celebrated on Friday, November 23rd. Although the program for the day has not yet been announced it is certain that among the invited guests will be Governor Pennypacker, Major General Charles Miller and other men of prominence in the State. Who the orator of the day will be has not yet been made public.

—Mr. George Bayard, formerly of this place, gave a very delightful roast bear dinner at the Windsor in Clearfield on Friday to a party of friends. Mr. James Connelly presented him with a six pound roast and he very generously invited a number of friends to share it with him. The party was made up as follows, Messrs. Cash and Race, of the Arlington Stock Co., Frank Conklin, Frank Ellis, Emmott Harder and Mr. Ames.

—W. M. Grove, of Centre Hill, and Hall Herring, of Penn Hall, lead two parties of surveyors running lines in the Seven mountains, locating the lands recently purchased by the forestry commission for the State. The land is not only surveyed and a line marked but a well defined path, sixteen feet wide, is made around each tract by cutting down all the underbrush and trimming all trees to a height of from fifteen to twenty feet. Later roads will be cut through the tracts.

—The Country Store, conducted last week by the ladies of the Bellefonte Reformed church, was a grand success in every particular. They cleared nearly three-hundred dollars. They could not begin to fill all the orders for homemade bread, pies and cakes, so they have decided to have a Thanksgiving markee for one day, and that will be the day previous to Thanksgiving so that those who desire good bread and pies should wait and help the ladies along. They had some clothing left from the store which was packed up and sent to the Reform orphanage at Womelsdorff, Pa., where there are a hundred and thirty three orphans.

—The Pittsburg Post says: Probably for the first time in the history of railroads no special holiday rates will be granted this year. No rates were granted for Thanksgiving day, and unless some action is taken at a meeting of the Central Passenger association at Chicago next week passengers will be compelled to pay regular fare during Christmas week. Railroad officials figure that they would not be justified in granting special holiday rates this year in view of the many reductions made in passenger fares all over the country. Usually the special rates are announced during the latter part of October, but so far no circulars have been issued, and it is generally believed that none will be issued. Representatives of certain trunk lines are said to favor the special holiday rates and will present a resolution to this effect at the Chicago meeting next week.

—Lucky is the man who has his coal bin full.

—Procure your Thanksgiving turkey early and get the best.

—Mr. and Mrs. Ed. Kane are rejoicing over the arrival of a baby boy.

—The Pennsy pay car made its regular monthly visit to Bellefonte Tuesday.

—How many bad sidewalks are there in town to stumble over during the winter months?

—James Patton, of Port Matilda, has purchased the Erb Care at Philipsburg, and will take charge in a few days.

—William Corman, of Buffalo Run, was admitted to the Bellefonte hospital for compound fracture of the lower jaw

—There will be a progressive euchre next Tuesday evening Nov. 20, in S. John's Parochial Hall. All are invited to attend.

—A very pleasant party was given on Saturday evening by Miss Mary Hicklen at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. C. K. Hicklen, of East Logan street. About fifteen young people were present. The guest of honor was Miss Blanche Ferguson, of Jersey Shore.

—A town is usually what its people make it. We have succeded in making Bellefonte one of the best towns in this section of the state, but let none of us be satisfied with our past and present accomplishments, but pull in vigrously together in building up a Greater Bellefonte.

—Samuel Weaver, of Scotia, met with a painful accident Saturday afternoon. He was helping to load a small car with iron rails when one fell on his right foot crushing it badly. He was taken to the Bellefonte Hospital for treatment. We are glad to say that the foot will not have to be amputated as at first feared.

DIED—Suddenly Saturday Nov. 10th. at New York Hospital, Edward Fullerton Milliken. Funeral from his brothers residence 46 West 74th. St. on Tuesday morning Nov. 13th. at 11.30 o'clock committal service Hillside cemetery Plainfield, N. J. on Tuesday afternoon Nov. 13th at 2.30 o'clock. Interment later in Lynchburg, Va.

—The law of the commonwealth requires township supervisors to erect sign boards at the forks of public roads for the information and guidance of the traveling public. The same law requires the constables of the several townships to see that the supervisors perform their duty and to report all failures to the court.

—On Tuesday evening November 6th Harry W. Fike, of Milesburg, and Sue Teresa Stanley, of Curtin's Works, were united in marriage at the Curtin homestead at Curtin's. The ceremony was performed by Justice of the Peace, Laird Curtin, and was the first ceremony he has ever performed and he feels just a little chesty over the affair.

—The skating rink craze has struck Bellefonte pretty hard and most every evening during the week, with the exception of Friday evening when the rink is not open, the armory is well filled and more than one night there have been as many as fifty skaters on rollers at one time. One reason why the sport is indulged in by so many is because the very best of order is maintained at all times.

—Forest fires are raging on the Allegheny mountains west of Altoona, and on the Loop mountain, south of Hollidaysburg. The fire on the Allegheny is in the shape of a gigantic horse-shoe as it burns its way along the mountain. The leaves which have recently fallen furnish much food for the flames. The fire on the Loop mountain originated in the vicinity of a stave mill and has gradually worked its way over the ridge. There is a lot of valuable young timber on both mountains, and the damage that is being wrought is great.

—The patrons of Knisely Brothers billiard parlor up town have been very much interested of late in a pool tournament in progress there for several weeks past. All the best pool players in town have taken part and the excitement as the contest drew to a close reached a fever heat. It ended Tuesday night and William C. Rowe is the victor and is now entitled to call himself the champion pool player of Bellefonte. The prize for which they contended was an eight dollar jointed billiard cue of very handsome design. Will very naturally feels a little bit chesty over the result.

—An important real estate deal was consummated Friday when the First National bank sold the three-story brick building on the southeast corner of Pennsylvania avenue and Tenth street, to Robert T. Garman, for a consideration of $15,500. This property was bought by the First National bank at its organization in 1890, for $10,000, from Messrs. McCamant, Robeson and McQuead. The bank occupied it sixteen years, until the recent completion of its new building on the northeast corner of the same streets. Mr. Garman is preparing at once to occupy the corner room vacated by the bank. He will establish his jewelry store there and the eplarged facilities of course mean that his stock and business will take on increased proportions. Robert Garman is the youngest son of Daniel Garman of this place.—Tyrone Herald.

—Getting a husband is easy enough; keeping one is what requires genius

—No matter how long the fall season lasts, winter always catches us not quite ready for it.

—The Good Will foot ball team will play Bellefonte Academy team at Athletic Park on Saturday next. This promises to be one of the most interesting games of foot ball ever played in Philipsburg.

—22 men and 32 boys was served with supper Tuesday evening at the Y. M. C. A. at which time four Bible classes were organized with the following teachers: Rev. J. Allison Platts, Prof. J. E. Dunning, C. N. Meserve and L. C. Godfrey.

—There will be no service at 11 am, next Sunday in St. John's Reformed church, as the pastor will hold communion service at Zion that morning. In the evening—in St. John's church, the 5th anniversary of the present pastorate will be celebrated.

—It has been pretty generally known for some time past, particularly among many of the friends of William P. Humes that he would request to be relieved from active connection with the First National Bank at the close of this present year, or on or about Thanksgiving day, November 29th. This action has been taken by Mr. Humes owing partly to outside business interests, and looking after his father's estate, which he has not been able to do satisfactorily, more particularly on account of his continuous services at the Bank. The large interest in the Bank held by his father's estate, (the late Edward C. Humes) as well as his own, and his sister, Miss Mira's interest, will remain with the Bank, and he will continue to be in the board of Directors as usual. While he will not be expected from this action to be in daily attendance at the Bank, yet when at home and not otherwise engaged will no doubt be frequently seen there, and often assisting when necessary in the general routine business affairs of the Bank.

Hayes Run Brick Co. Hold Annual Meeting.

The annual meeting of the Hayes Run Fire Brick company was held at the office of the company at Orvis Friday. B. F Pletcher, an expert accountant, had been engaged to audit the books of the company and the financial report he submitted to the stockholders was very satisfactory. It showed that the affairs of the company was in a healthy and even flourishing condition.

The plant was recently enlarged to meet the demands for the output and it has been running for some time to its full capacity, with plenty orders booked ahead. Ten new brick cased dwellings are now in course of construction for the accommodation of employes, and when these are completed the company will have about 40 dwelling houses.

The following are the directors elected for the ensuing year: Hon. E. L. Orvis of Bellefonte, T. M. Stevenson, W. O. Bentley and W. I. Harvey of Lock Haven, and J. K. Furst of New Castle.

The directors chose the following officers: Judge E. L. Orvis, president; W. O. Bentley, secretary; and W. I. Harvey, general manager and treasurer.

Holds Sons in Front of Train.

A tragedy was enacted recently three miles out of Childress, Texas, on the Colorado and Southern Railway, which shows that depravity to which strong drink will lead a human being.

Two little boys, scarcely more than babes, were deliberately held in front of a passenger train by their father, who stood in the centre of the track and calmly awaited death.

The man's name is C. A. Carham. The train was late into Childress, and was running at a high speed to make up lost time, when three miles out, as the engine rounded a curve, the engineer saw a man and two little boys standing on the track. The father was standing directly between the rails, holding with each hand one of his sons.

A shrill blast of the whistle was given, but the man never moved. The youngsters vainly tried to pull away from their father, but were held firmly. The engineer reversed and threw on the brakes, but it was too late. The engine hurled their bodies from its path, the father dead, the boys fatally injured.

Missing Since Election.

The Editor of one of our Bellefonte weeklies who has for some months past, been urging the claims of Edwin S. Stuart for Governor, lost his loudest crowing rooster the day after election when he needed the vociferous service of the rooster more than ever just then.

Mr. Editor has spent no little time looking for that fugitive crower on the neighbors premises. Diligent search has been made in The Democratic Watchman's precincts, but nothing is found there except two or three little peeps too young yet to crow.

Neighbors are still on the look out. The finder of that stray rooster will please report at The Keystone Gazette office soon as possible.

RIPENED SHEAF GARNERED.

Mrs. Margaret Heberling of Mill Hall Called to her Better home.

Margaret Heberling, wife of Joseph Heberling, deceased, died at 2.15 Friday afternoon at the home of her son, James P. Heberling in Mill Hall, with whom she had made her home most of the time for 20 years. After an illness of one week she quietly passed out into that country whence no traveler returns. She was a member of the Lutheran church the greater part of her life and gave evidence to the close of her life that she had implicit faith and trust in the Great Christ.

Mrs. Heberling was born January 22, 1821, and was 85 years, 9 months and 18 days old. The greater part of her life was spent in Centre county, where she was always respected as a quiet and peace loving neighbor.

She was the mother of 13 children, 8 of whom still survive. Their names and residences are as follows: James P. Heberling, Mill Hall; J. G. Heberling, Pine Grove Mills; J. H. Heberling and Mrs. Miles Harpster, Penna. Furnace; Mrs. E. P. Gates, Warriors Mark; Miss Emma Heberling, T. L. Heberling and S. T. Heberling of Tyrone. She had been a sufferer from rheumatism for many years but bore all with patience.

Her children and her many friends mourn the loss of a sweet and genial spirited companion, but their loss is her gain. It is comforting in such crisis to know that we have the christian's hope which is that though we be severed in the body here for a few days, we shall be reunited there in the glory land, where pain cannot reach and sorrow cannot come. So we trustfully submit to the will of the Father, who doeth all things well.

There was a brief funeral service at the home of James P. Heberling on Market street at 8 o'clock Monday morning. The service was in charge of Rev. J. J. Resh. After the service the body was taken to Gatesburg, Centre county, for interment.

The service in Gatesburg was in the Lutheran church in charge of the pastor, Rev. L. F. Bergstresser, assisted by Rev. J. J. Resh of Mill Hall.

Boston Coming to Bellefonte.

The Pittsburg Post of Wednesday of last week says:

"Pittsburg for sometime has been alarmed over the loss of so many of her promising young preachers, who have been sought by churches of other cities. Rev. S. L. Boston, who has only get well started in his work, has had an offer from the Huntingdon presbytery of the Presbyterian church to become its started evangelist. Mr. Boston every year for some time has spent a few weeks conducting successful evangelistic services in some of the best churches. It is believed he will decline the offer, as he so recently entered upon his work in the Park Avenue church."

Rev. Boston assisted Dr. Platts in holding preparatory services in the Bellefonte Presbyterian church for two weeks prior to last Sunday's communion, when eleven new members were received into the church.

It will be glad news to our people to learn also that if he accepts the offer from the Huntingdon Presbytery, referred to above, he will make his home in Bellefonte, as he would be centrally located and has fallen in love with our town.

Y. M. C. A. Notes.

The membership of the Association is being polled by means of questionian postal cards for the purpose of securing suggestions for the winters work.

The responses show a live interest in the association, so the outlook for the winter's work is excellent.

The Lawn Party is the title of a very laughable entertainment that will be produced by members of the Y. M. C. A. gymnasium class, in Petrikin Hall early in December. A quantity of burnt cork will be used so the funniest kind of funny fun is guaranteed.

Crosthwaite—Goheen.

A simple but impressive wedding took place at the M. E. parsonage Wednesday evening, when Frank A. Crosthwaite, the genial agent at the Bellefonte Central passenger station, was united to Mrs Mary Gobeen, prominent in State College society circles. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. C. C. Snavely, in the presence of a few close friends of the contracting parties. Mr. and Mrs. Crosthwaite are receiving congratulations of their many friends.

HUNTINGDON PRESBYTERY.

Evangelist to be Employed to Labor in this Field.

Rev. Samuel Moody presided and there were twenty ministers and seven elders present, at the adjourned meeting of Huntingdon presbytery, held in the First Presbyterian church of Tyrone on Monday afternoon.

The committee appointed to employ a Presbyterial evangelist reported recommending that an evangelist be employed to labor within the bounds of presbytery. The amount of salary was fixed at $2,000, and necessary expenses. It was recommended that offerings be taken in each church in which he labors, which shall be turned over to the treasurer of the evangelistic committee to be applied on his salary.

It was also recommended that the direction of the labors in the matters of time and place be referred to the evangelistic committee of presbytery and that a guarantee fund of not less than $2,500 be provided, 25 per cent. of which will be due and subject to call of the treasurer as soon as an evangelist can be secured. The recommendations were adopted after Rev. H. D. Bowlby, had led the presbytery in prayer for the divine guidance.

The committee on the organization of a church at South Altoona reported the organization of a church at that point, October 19. The report was approved and the name of the church was enrolled. The call of the church at Milesburg for the Rev. R. G. McLeod was taken from the table and returned to the church. Rev. C. Clair was appointed alternate to preach the missionary sermon at the spring meeting.

An invitation for the April meeting of presbytery was received from the Third church at Altoona and accepted. Rev. Walter L. Whalen was appointed moderator of South Altoona church.

Academy Defeats the Normal.

The Bellefonte Academy gridiron warriors have reason to be proud of their good work this season. Last week they won two very creditable victories over Williamsport High School and Lock Haven Normal, defeating the latter team on Saturday by the score of 10-0.

In the first half the local players rushed the normalites off their feet, Pantall kicking a goal from the field and Weaver making a touchdown from which Pantall kicked a pretty goal. In the second half the visitors took a brace and prevented the Academy from making any further score.

The line up:

Lock Haven	position	Academy
Snyder,	c	McCaslin
Wilson,	r g	Schenk
Weaver,	r t	Lyon
Parsons,	r e	Armstrong
Meyer,	l g	McCreight
Fleming,	l t	Dansmore
Bastian,	l e	Pantall
Patterson,	q b	Fullerton
Peck,	r h b	McCarthy
Carlburg,	l h b	Tompkins Mitchell
Donohue,	f b	Weaver

Touchdown—Weaver. Goal from touchdown—Pantall. Goal from field—Pantall. Refree—Bush. Umpire—Walker Timekeepers—Cussey and Hughes. Linesmen—Knecht and Moore. Time of halves—20 minutes.

Tobacco Crop Gives Farmers $2,000,000.

It is estimated that York county farmers will receive between $2,000,000 and $2,500,000 for the tobacco they raised during the last summer. The crop was the largest grown in York county for many years.

About 12,000 acres were planted, which was an increase over the acreage of the previous season. The income per acre is approximately $210. The cost of raising the tobacco is from $55 to $75 per acre.

Tobacco is one of the important factors on the farms of the lower part of York county, and it is becoming more important every year.
